Republican in Politics, to be Established in Newark.

PROMINENT MEN INTERESTED

Company Incorporated at Columbus Wednesday With a Capital of Fifty Thousand Dollars.

Columbus, O., April 26—Articles of incorporation were issued here this afternoon for the Newark News Printing and Publishing company of Newark, Ohio, with a capital stock of $50,000. The purpose of the new company is to print a newspaper at Newark and to do all kinds of printing. The incorporators are: Messrs. Frank P. Kennedy, Capt. A. H. Heisey, A. R. Lindorf, William C. Miller, W. H. Mazey, William W. Wehrle, Edwin C. Wright, Arthur C. Hatch, Henry S. Fleek and John J. Carroll.

The foregoing dispatch brings news of the establishment of a third paper in Newark and confirms the rumors that have been afloat for some time about town. When one of these leading men connected with the enterprise was seen by the Advocate he said that while all the arrangements for starting the business have not been completed, affairs have progressed to such a point that assurance can be given that the newspaper will start publication within a month. The new company has leased the Doty house property and will have for its office the room formerly used for the hotel office. The press and composing rooms will be located in the rear.

Some of the leading men of Newark are identified with the new company as shown by the list of incorporators. Mr. Kennedy is vice president of the Newark Trust company, Mr. Heisey is the well known manufacturer, Mr. Lindorf is a member of the dry goods firm of Meyer & Lindorf, Mr. Miller is secretary-treasurer of the Powers-Miller company, Mr. Mazey, manager of the H. H. Griggs dry goods store, Mr. Wehrle, president of the Wehrle Stove company, Mr. Wright, cashier of the First National bank, Mr. Hatch, late business manager of the American Tribune, Mr. Fleek, member of the wholesale grocery firm of Fleek & Neal, Mr. Carroll, proprietor of Carroll's dry goods store.

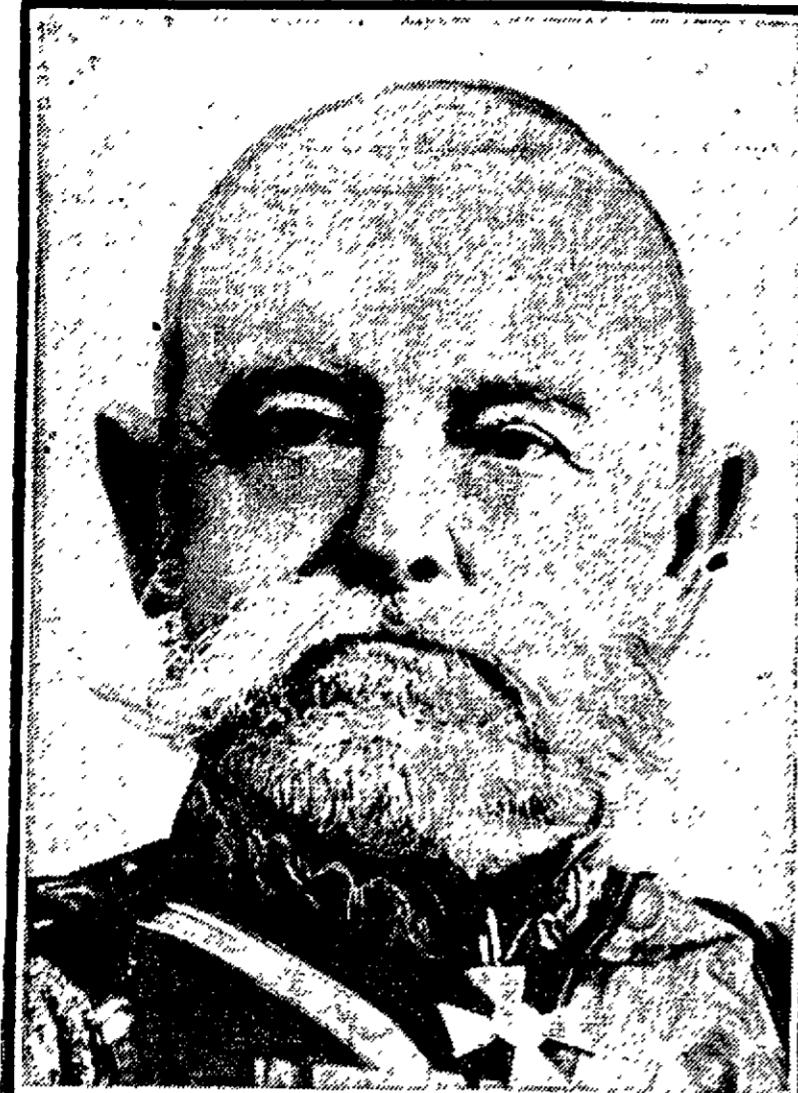

The gentleman who was seen by the Advocate had nothing further to say, except that the new paper will be Republican in politics and will probably be an evening paper.

While nothing authentic can be learned on the subject, it is hinted that Mr. Hatch will be business manager.

THE POPULAR COMMANDER OF RUSSIA'S ARMIES IN MANCHURIA.

General Linnévitch, the successor of General Kuropatkin as commander in chief of Russia's armies in Manchuria, is probably the most popular military officer in the service of the czar. He is the idol of his men. Linnévitch is really a capable officer, and the fact that since his assumption of the supreme command disaster has followed disaster is attributable to previously existing conditions. Linnévitch led the allies to Peking during the Boxer uprising, and it was generally conceded that the best troops then under his command were

CONVICTED

IS TAKEN TO KNOX COUNTY REAL SLAYER IN OHIO PEN

Rumors Are Thick But Officers Mum ---Little Evidence has Developed So Far.

Mt. Vernon, O., April 26.—George Copeland, the eighteen-year-old colored boy, who was arrested here for the murder of Miss Miranda Bricker and who was taken to Columbus early Monday morning to prevent a possible lynching, was brought back to Mt. Vernon this morning by a deputy sheriff, arriving here at 2:10 o'clock.

Copeland was taken at once to the jail, and only two or three people knew of his coming saw him as he was taken from the train to prison.

At 9 o'clock today the negro was taken to Prosecuting Attorney Still well's office where he was put through the sweating process for several hours and then returned to jail. The officials are extremely secretive about the case and will say absolutely nothing. It is said that Copeland has not as yet been able to satisfactorily account for his whereabouts last Saturday night, at the time the crime was committed, but that circumstances seem more favorable to him than at first. The only known evidence against the boy is the fact that the bloodhounds led the officers to his house, that his shoes fit the tracks in the Fairchild's yard, and that a cap said to belong to Copeland, was found on a hedge fence at the Fairchild's residence. The boy stoutly protests his innocence, and so far as known has shown no indication of breaking down.

All sorts of rumors are afloat and one person telephoned from Newark this afternoon saying it was reported on the streets there this afternoon that Copeland had confessed. There is apparently no danger of mob violence.

Copeland's Mother Talks.

Mt. Vernon, O., April 26—Mrs. David Copeland, mother of George, says that when George arrived home Saturday night about 11 o'clock, she was sewing. She did not pay any particular attention to the time, but thinks that it was about the hour given. She says he came in through the front door—not the rear door at which the bounds ended their trail. According to the mother her son sat down and read a short time and then fell asleep. After she had finished her sewing she took a bath and then awakened him and he retired. After getting up Sunday George took a bath and left for the restaurant at which he had been employed. Mrs. Copeland said that the first that was known of their home of the morning was through a message telephoned by Master George Newman, the young boy who boards there with his grandfather, Jerome Newman.

Lacrosse, Wis., April 26—In a fit of melancholy this morning Mrs. Frank Powell, wife of the city engineer, one of the most beautiful women in the city, threw out her brains with a revolver. The tragedy is said to be the result of her husband's failure to receive a reappointment.

WAITING GAME

Is Being Played by Togo Say Naval Officers.

EARLY FIGHT NOT PROBABLE

Dangers Beset Rojestvensky—Russian Fleet Not Sighted at Hong Kong After All.

Washington, April 26—While all indications today seem to point to the fact that the Russian and Japanese fleets in the China sea are approaching each other, news of a general battle is not expected by naval experts for several days. Divergent views are expressed as to the probable outcome. An officer of the quartermaster's department of the army who has recently been through Japan and Korea says even if Togo should be defeated in the coming encounter it would not materially interfere with the communications between the Japanese armies in the field and the home government as the distance across the straits of Korea is scarcely more than 100 miles. This stretch of water is dotted with many small islands and the whole has been carefully minned. There is practically uninterrupted communication by rail between the army and home base. If Rojestvensky takes the inside course through the straits and sea in his efforts to reach Vladivostok he will find the path beset by many mines. If he takes the longer and less dangerous course through the open ocean east of Japan he will have to be well supplied with colliers and provision ships to succeed in the attempt. The general opinion of the officers in the navy department is that Togo is playing a waiting game.

RUSSIANS NOT SIGHTED.

Hong Kong, April 26—The steamer Calchas this morning reported having sighted the Russian squadron of battleships and cruisers off Linting Island, apparently heading for the Philippines. Later reports show the officers of the Calchas erred and that the squadron sighted was composed of British warships.

THIRD BALTIC SQUADRON

Penang Island, Straits of Settlement, April 26—It is expected that the third Baltic squadron under the command of Rear Admiral Nebogatoff will pass here today. The authorities have been keeping a close watch for the fleet and have been patrolling the approaches to the harbor every night.

FIGHT NOT IMMINENT

General Action Between Eastern Fleets Likely to be Delayed Think Russian Officials.

St. Petersburg, April 26.—The admiralty continues mistrustful of many of the dispatches from the far east reporting the sighting of Russian and Japanese ships. The officials apparently are certain, however, that Admiral Nebogatoff has not yet entered the China sea. Some naval officers are of opinion that Admiral Rojestvensky has left some of his transports behind to be convoyed by Nebogatoff, and has pushed on, favored by the thick weather reported along the coast. But the majority believe that Rojestvensky will cruise along the Annam coast until Nebogatoff joins him, pointing out that he can afford to play a waiting game.

Officials are coming to accept the view that there will be no great or general action between the fleets of Russia and Japan for some time, basing their belief on strategic and tactical reasons which incline Admiral Togo to avoid a decisive action until he has made every effort to demoralize the Russian fleet by torpedo attacks and interference with transports by his cruiser division. The admiralty scouted the reports that engagements have already occurred, pointing out the great distance separating the places where the dispatches originated. A naval staff captain declared that the reports from any source should be doubted. The probability of a sortie by the Vladivostok squadron in an attempt to join Admiral Rojestvensky is discussed by the Razvedchik, a military weekly paper, which confirms the report that the line cruisers, Gromoboi, Russia and Beatty, have been repaired, and that Vladivostok harbor is free of ice and comments on the accession of strength to Rojestvensky.

Weather Prediction.

For Newark and vicinity: Rain to-night, probably Thursday; warmer Thursday.

sky. The paper also intimates that there is possibility that Vice Admiral Nebogatoff may await second reinforcing squadron, and expresses the opinion that Rojestvensky will now proceed as rapidly as possible to Vladivostok.

SUPPLIES FOR RUSSIANS.

Manila, April 26.—The British steamer Carlisle sailed from this port, having cleared for Port Said. In some quarters it is thought she will attempt to connect with Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet. The Carlisle was chartered by the Russian government and loaded with arms, ammunition and food supplies for the Russian garrison at Port Arthur. She sailed from Vladivostok Nov. 20 last and was unable either to make a landing at Port Arthur or return to Vladivostok. When 200 miles east of Yokohama the Carlisle lost her propeller. Under sail she worked into the harbor of San Miguel, on the coast of Luzon, whence she was brought to Manila and repaired.

SAW RUSSIAN CRUISERS.

Salon, Cochin China, April 26.—It is reported that four Russian cruisers are lying off the coast. The statements that the crew of the Russian protected cruiser Diana joined Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron are again pronounced absolutely unfounded. On the contrary, since the Diana has been interned the most minute precautions have been taken to prevent the slightest breach of neutrality.

SHIPS CAPTURED BY RUSSIANS.

Saigon, Cochin China, April 26.—Two ships loaded with rice for Saigon and bound for Japan have been captured by ships belonging to the Russian squadron.

TOO MANY WIVES HAS MR. HENSCHEL

STREAK OF MORMON SEEMS TO BE IN TWENTY YEAR OLD DETROIT PAINTER.

Henschel Admits That He Has Two Wives and is Said to be Engaged to Another.

Detroit, Mich., April 26—Married to two women and engaged to the third is the situation in which Frank Henschel, a twenty year old painter, of this city, finds himself. He was located in Toledo by his first wife, Hannah Poelke Henschel, and brought back here, where he was arrested on the charge of bigamy preferred by May Kiefer Henschel, wife No. 2. Martha Wolf, the latest object of his affections is talking of suing him for breach of promise.

Henschel admits he is a bigamist. He says that shortly after leaving his wife last December he met Miss Kiefer. She also was suffering with a wounded heart, and mutual expressions of sympathy followed. Henschel says he felt he was no longer a married man and, under the name of Fischer, he married Miss Kiefer. When his first wife came after him he managed to keep the two wives apart. He invented a reason for his trip to Detroit, and told wife No. 2 that he would soon return, but he had previously confided to his second spouse that his stepmother's name was Henschel. Hence when she read in the papers that a man by the name of Henschel had been caught in Toledo by his wife and returned to Detroit she at once reported to the police.

Henschel's first wife sticks to him. She said to him, "Don't tell anybody, Frank, that you have another wife and I will live with you just the same, and we will try to be happy, because I love you."

Miss Wolf is not so charitable. She said: "My, what a mess he is in! Let him suffer. He deserves it. I have good grounds for a breach of promise suit. I don't know but I will make him some more trouble."

"Why did I marry wife No. 2? Because I could not help it I guess," said Henschel. "I did not stop to think. I only knew that Mamie Kiefer had been discounted."

"I will go back to Toledo to swallow the medicine the law proposes to administer for the Mormon streak in my make up."

EVIDENCE

Of Postoffice Robbery at Northeast, Pa. Was Found on Nickel Plate Train This Morning.

Painesville, O., April 26—Evidence of the postoffice robbery at Northeast, Pa. this morning was found on a Nickel Plate freight there this morning. A brakeman discovered a stamp cabinet containing $89 in stamps and a package of foreign and domestic money or checks in an open car containing machinery. The find was turned over to Postmaster J. P. Barden, who has notified the police. The freight left Northeast this morning. The postoffice safe at Northeast was dynamited and a couple of hundred dollars stolen, it is reported.

Cleveland, O., April 26—Death resulting from a scratch on the finger is made the basis for an action now being tried in Judge Ford's court. The Erie Life Insurance company refused to pay a policy of $5,000 on the life of Elias Rhenheimer, who in attempting to unlock the door of his residence, scratched his finger with the key. Blood poisoning caused death.

When reconstructed the Erie canal will be four times as long as the Seneca canal.

MASS OF FLESH AND BONE

Crowd of Frenzied People So Great That Police Were Called to the Scene.

(Bulletin.)

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 26—Ten miners fell to their death in the Conyngham mine this morning by the breaking of a hoisting rope. The shaft is nearly 1000 feet deep and the men were being lowered to work. All were dashed to the bottom. When found the men were a mangled mass of flesh and bone.

The crowd of frenzied people at the shaft was so great that a squad of police, led by the mayor and chief, went to the scene to preserve order. Superintendent Foote examined the broken rope and found it broke 250 feet from the carriage. It was cut clean as with some instrument.

Up to noon but seven of the dead have been identified. They are: William Harvey, leaves wife and family.

FALLEN TREE

Threw a C. & O. Train Into Greenbrier River—Fireman Killed and Passengers Hurt.

Hinton, W. Va., April 26—A tree blown from the mountain side across the tracks of the C. & O. railroad, between Roceverte and Elkins, on the Greenbrier branch, threw a passenger train No. 144 into the Greenbrier river at 8 o'clock last night, killing Fireman A. Culp and injuring Engineer C. H. Dean and six passengers.

The train, consisting of two coaches and engine 143 left Roceverte at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and the accident occurred 83 miles from there. When the train went into the river the cars took fire from the illuminating gas and burned to the water's edge. Culp, the fireman, was buried beneath the engine. Engineer Dean was taken out badly injured and borne to the an improvised hospital at Cass.

The six passengers were not seriously injured and were able to return to Roceverte last night, where they were given medical attention.

LITTLE DAUGHTER FINDS DEAD BODY

Child Notifies Police of the Murder of Her Mother in New York.

Belief That Woman Was Strangled and Robbed—Search Is Made for One Destosito.

New York, April 26—The lifeless body of Marie Roiduc, aged 45, was found this morning in her apartment in the east side, with a handkerchief stuffed down her throat. The body was discovered by her 8 year old daughter, Rosina.

According to the story told by the girl her mother was visited last night by a man named Destosito and his friend. The friend's name, the girl does not know. During the course of the evening, according to the girl, much drink was indulged in and about 8 o'clock she was put to bed. This morning the girl awoke and upon going into the room where her mother entertained her friends found her dead. Her dress was disarranged. This leads to the belief that the woman was strangled for the express purpose of robbing her of her savings, which it was generally known were hidden in her person. The police are looking for Destosito and his companion.

In speaking of the death of J. M. Hockenbury at Connellsville, Pa., last Friday, the Connellsville News says in part:

"Dr. Hockenbury had been in delicate health for several years and his death is said to have been due to overwork. In addition to practicing his profession, that of an eye specialist, he was a dispatcher for the B. & O. railroad.

"He had been located in Connellsville for four years, having come here from Newark in 1901. He has been identified with the B. & O. since he was 14 years old. Previous to coming to Connellsville he took a course in the Philadelphia optical school and received his diploma. He has been working at his vocation with the railroad company and attending his patients."

MY KIDNAPING

[Original]

I was told that my father and I had idolized each other, but as I was only four years old when, as my mother always expressed it, "he left us" I did not remember him.

When I was a girl of sixteen I was one day watching a housemaid move a desk. She was about to put it back in its place when I noticed the corner of an envelope sticking out from the back of the desk. I took hold of it and drew it out. It was addressed to my mother, had never been opened, and the post mark bore a date of twelve years before. I concluded to open it. It read:

If you are convalescent, write me definitely by return mail. After Saturday it will be too late.

It was signed with a single letter, either an M. or a W., I could not be certain which.

I placed the note in one of the little drawers in the upper part of the desk. My mother was absent at the time, and I intended to call her attention to it on her return, but forgot all about it.

One evening I visited a friend who lived a few doors from our house, and, on taking my leave, started to go home alone. A carriage was standing by the curb, and two men were loitering on the sidewalk. As I passed they approached me, and almost before I knew what had happened they had lifted me off my feet and put me in the carriage. Then they both got in and shut the door, and the coachman drove away.

I begged them with tears to tell me what it all meant and what they were going to do with me. One of them assured me that no harm would come to me and I had best calm myself. After driving some distance they entered large grounds and stopped under the porte cochere of a dwelling. The door of the house opened, and a matronly woman came out, put her arm about me with a pleasant smile and led me into the house and up into a bedroom, where she said I would spend the night. I questioned her, but she gave me no information, though she assured me that no harm would come to me. I learned something, however, from overhearing a telephone message, the instrument being fixed in the hall. One of the men who had kidnapped me was talking.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The wife of a soft made man always wishes that she had been around earlier to have a hand in the making.

Just have a note due tomorrow and see if tomorrow never comes.

A woman can keep a secret provided it relates to a joke on herself.

Some people think that electricity is the active principle of life. They may have got that notion from fooling with a live wire.

Building fires in the morning is the road that may wreck love in a cottage. Better try a steam heated bat the first year.

Machine politicians do part of their work by hand. They collect the graft that way.

Every wise person will lay by at least an umbrella for a rainy day.

A miser may be a man who by a brach test has discovered that money is the only true friend.

No man is absolutely perfect, but what does he care so long as he can make some girl think that he is?

Sometimes a man's strength fails him when he sees an attack of family reunion coming on.

A rich husband is a mighty handy article of furniture to have about the house, as all women of experience will testify.

Fickle Fortune.

When fortune you would try to win, That fair and fickle goddes, Adown the highway takes a spin. Almost as swift as Maud S. When far behind you try to follow, Her mocking laugh is cold and hollow.

Where is there such exciting sport Or chase so swift and thrilling As found in practice of this sort? Though seldom comes a killing, For fortune has a way of keeping Three blocks away and seldom sleeping.

Sometimes you see the fickle maid And fancy she is flirting, But when you follow, I'm afraid, Your extra strength exerting, You'll find when from the foot race cooling That she, alas, was only fooling.

Some lucky ones, it almost seems, Though lobsters cannot shake her, But though the average fellow schemes, He seldom can outwit her, For when at last his chance seems well She walks off with another fellow.

"I hope, dear, that you will have a perfectly lovely time at that banquet Tuesday night."

"Oh, I don't know. I thought I would like to go, but it is a stag, you know, and I hate to leave you."

"Oh, don't speak of it. I have your evening clothes all fresh from the tailor and everything ready for you. You need to go out by yourself once in awhile."

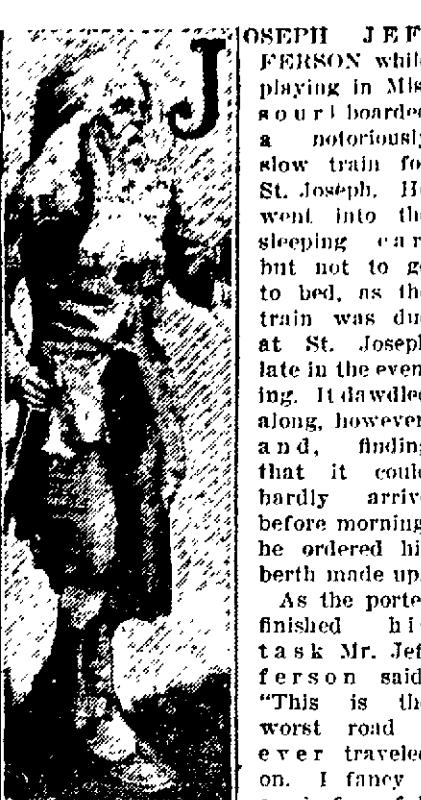

Then when Tuesday night came and her husband said as she urged him not to be late that he would be hanged if he wanted to go she smiled to herself and later told her next door neighbor that there was nothing like insisting on a man going out if you want him to stay at home.

STAGE TALES OF JEFFERSON AND OTHERS

JOSEPH JEF-FERSON while playing in Missouri boarded a notoriously slow train for St. Joseph. He went into the sleeping car, but not to go to bed, as the train was due at St. Joseph late in the evening. It dawdled along, however, and, finding that it could hardly arrive before morning, he ordered his berth made up.

As the porter finished his task Mr. Jefferson said, "This is the worst road I ever traveled on. I fancy I am in for a full night of it."

"Ded, I reckon you is sah," replied the porter, with a smile.

"Positively the slowest road! It'll be morning before we are there. Do you think you'll get in before I'm awake?"

"Slow road, sah! Bound to be plumb mo'nin, sah. But one of the passengers, sah, was tellin' me that you's Rip Van Winkle, the gen'leman what once went to sleep and slept twenty years, and I reckon, sah, dat if you take one o' dem naps we'll be able to land you mighty close to St. Jo 'fore you wake sah."

Jefferson once went by request to Catskill, N. Y., the scene of the story of "Rip Van Winkle," to produce the play. "After the performance," he said, "I was invited to a reception given in my honor at the Rip Van Winkle club. In introducing me the president of the club was greatly embarrassed over something and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I—I wish to introduce to you Mr.—Mr.—Mr. Washington Irving!"

Once when Jefferson was playing Rip Van Winkle in St. Louis he went to the theater tired by a long day's journey. The curtain rose on the third act and disclosed him deep in his twenty years' nap. Five, ten minutes elapsed, but he did not awake. The audience grew impatient. At length the gallery waxed uproarious, inquiring if there was going to be nineteen years more of this sleeping business.

Still Jefferson slept on and actually snored. Opening a small trapdoor beneath the stage, the prompter prodded Rip from below, only to see him fumble in his pocket for an imaginary railway ticket and hear him mutter, "Going clear through, conductor?" Of course this brought down the house.

THE SUN IMAGE

(Original)

Oliver Adams and I were sitting one afternoon in a room facing the west. A shutter was closed, and the sunlight shone through the spaces at the ends of the slats. Now, though the spaces were not round, we noticed that a round spot of light from each crack fell on the wall opposite the window. I had often seen the phenomenon before and called Adams' attention to it. A singular expression came over his face as he looked at them.

"Can you explain the circular form?" I asked.

"Only that the spots of light are minute images of the sun," he replied. "But it isn't this that interests me. I can never look at one of those little sun images without being profoundly moved."

"Out with it," I said, for I knew there was a story behind his emotion.

"When I was married," he said, "to the best woman in the world—I drew a matrimonial prize among hundreds of blanks—I was doing well in business and was able to provide for the three little kids that came along during the first five years of my married life. My wife was not extravagant; indeed, she looked out for the nickels very carefully. Nevertheless, no matter how careful a woman may be in this respect, she is a natural plunger, and I found out my Daisy was one of that kind."

"When I was married," he said, "to the best woman in the world—I drew a matrimonial prize among hundreds of blanks—I was doing well in business and was able to provide for the three little kids that came along during the first five years of my married life. My wife was not extravagant; indeed, she looked out for the nickels very carefully. Nevertheless, no matter how careful a woman may be in this respect, she is a natural plunger, and I found out my Daisy was one of that kind."

"One afternoon I went to the 'den' with but $20 in my pocket, and I must have looked pretty miserable, for my wife kissed me before I left the house and said, 'Be sure to be home for dinner,' just as if she didn't know that if I got absorbed I wouldn't pay any attention to dinner or any other meal. I played very close, seldom risking much at one time, for my capital was a bagatelle. Despite my caution my pile grew lower and lower, and at last I had but one white chip left. The dealer wasn't paying much attention to me and was yawning incessantly, having been at his work all the night before. I was so absorbed that I didn't notice a young fellow who came and leaned over me, watching my game. I put my last chip on the ten and lost. I was a dead man.

"The dealer, ignorant that I had nothing to bet with, went on with the game. And now I'm getting to the point of my story. Through a crack in the window one of these little suns came in and lighted on the jack. The dealer blinked at it and didn't seem sure whether it was a white chip or a silver dollar. The young man behind me said, 'Deal.' This decided the sleepy man, and he dealt. The jack won, and he tossed me a white chip. The young man behind me, without asking permission, pushed the chip over between the king and queen, and it won. I sat stupidly looking on, the young man making my bets for me and winning every time.

"The dealer began to wake up and take an interest. My bet placed was taking awful chances, and I wanted to stop him, but I remembered that all my winnings had been on an image of the sun and didn't dare say a word for fear he'd flare up and give it away. The piles before me grew and grew, and suddenly I was startled by hearing the dealer cry, 'Busted!' The first thing I did after that was to turn to look at the man behind me to see if the devil had done it all to get my soul with the winnings. Great heavens, whom do you suppose I saw? Under a sombre drawn down over the face glittered a pair of eyes, and those eyes belonged to Daisy. She turned like a flash and left the place, leaving me to pick up my winnings. I stuffed all my pockets full and went home. When I went upstairs Daisy was in bed. She asked me the usual question—had I put out the lights. I replied, as usual, that I had and turned in.

"I received my $250 one morning and in the afternoon went with it to try to recover my losses, telling Daisy I was going to take a walk. I won over $1,000, but lost it the same night, winning and losing alternately. My wife knew as well as I what I was doing but never said a word, pretending that I had and turned in.

I won over $1,000, but lost it the same night, winning and losing alternately. My wife knew as well as I what I was doing but never said a word, pretending that I had and turned in.

"That's why I say a woman is a natural plunger. Daisy would have gone back with me the next day to break the bank again, but I had had enough of it, and we agreed that I should return to my business. I did so and have done well, as you know, ever since. Now, I fancy, after what I've told you, you don't wonder that I never see one of those little sun images without a profound stirring of my emotions."

Chugwater's Wife Was

True to Her Promise

JOSIAH," said Mrs. Chugwater, "what do you do at those lodge meetings you attend twice a month?"

"You don't expect me to tell you that, do you? Our proceedings are secret."

"A man oughtn't to have any secrets from his wife. What is the password?"

"I've taken a solemn obligation never to communicate that to any outsider."

"I'm not an outsider. A man and his wife are one. You have a right to communicate it to me."

Mr. Chugwater reflected.

"Well," he said, "I repeat the password to you once, will you promise never to ask me to say it again?"

"Yes."

"And you will never tell anybody else?"

"Never."

Whereupon he rapidly uttered the following astonishing word:

"Magellinekkazakenalattaryvistualizabelililwinkamanakalitooleero."

Mrs. Chugwater kept her promise. She never repeated that password to a living soul.—Chicago Tribune.

One of the Others.

John Drew was one of a party of actors who one night after a performance in Chicago accepted a clubman's invitation to enjoy a moonlight ride on Lake Michigan.

"It was a grand night," said Mr. Drew, "and I never heard sweeter music than that which reached us on deck from the cabin. Worned from exertion in dance and song, the company soon assembled on deck, and there carried on a subdued conversation. Clouds gathered and obscured the moon.

SILVER WEDDING

Celebrated Tuesday by Mr. and Mrs. Silas Snelling at their home on German Street.

Silas J. Snelling and his excellent wife, who now reside in their pleasant home on South German street, celebrated the 25th anniversary of their marriage by inviting about 60 of their nearest friends and relatives to take dinner with them in their new home Tuesday. This invitation was very generally accepted and when the bright and happy faces began to put in their appearance the sunshine of gladness soon filled each heart. When the time came for all to go to their respective homes they all left their best wishes that Mr. and Mrs. Snelling may have the pleasure of many more happy years. This was not all, for on the silver table were found more tokens of friendship and love. The little cards revealed the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Yowell had left on this table a silver pitcher, Mrs. Sarah Snelling and Mrs. Ellie Baughman a silver bread tray, Mrs. Name Delhi a silver berry spoon, Mr. and Mrs. Rachel Courson a silver berry spoon and gravy ladle, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. and J. E. Snelling silver butter dish, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Dusthimer silver knives and forks, Mr. and Mrs. Noble Snelling, silver cream ladle, Mr. and Mrs. Milford Griffith silver gravy ladle, Miss Hattie Snelling set silver tea spoons, Mr. and Mrs. Arch Lytle set silver tea spoons, Mr. and Mrs. Lavina Snelling Easter picture, Mrs. Sarah House, picture Welcome Reception, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Courson, silver butter knife and sugar spoon. The presence of Rev. Mr. Yantis added greatly to the pleasure of the day.

IN HER HOUSE

She Kept the Suitor, Appropriating His Pay Checks, While Promising Marriage.

Youngstown, O., April 26.—The probation to which Mrs. Hermania Sikora subjected one George Pope did not rebound to his credit. George was turned down in a matrimonial way.

Some time ago while living in Niles the two agreed to be married, and a license was issued to them at Warren. But the woman thought it would be better to wait awhile. Meanwhile George lived at the house, and when she moved to Youngstown he came along with the other boarders.

Monday night Hermania caused George to be arrested on the charge that he had entered the house and had in his possession a long knife with which he threatened to do bodily harm to some one.

It developed in the hearing that Mrs. Sikora had given up the idea of marrying her blue eyed Roumanian, while George said that his buxom German lass had appropriated all his pay checks, giving him but little funds.

HORSE SALE

Attracted a Large Number of Buyers Tuesday—Thirty-Six Crawford Horses Sold.

The horse sale at the Sharon Valley Stock Farm Tuesday was a grand success in every particular. The day being ideal the crowd was very large and the bidding was spirited. Col. Crawford as usual had a fine collection of drafters, drivers and farm chucks, prices ranging from $100 to $300 per horse. One fine pair of dapple greys brought $300, one fine three year old Belgian mare $300. Buyers from many sections of the country were present, Mr. W. W. Byers of New York, being the most extensive buyer, purchasing eight of the large drafters at an average of $250. Col. Crawford was in his usual good humor and conducted the sale in the best of style, and Mr. Bert Crawford did exceptionally well in showing the horses. Thirty-six horses were sold.

BAIRD-DUFFEY

Pretty Wedding Solemnized at the St. Francis de Sales Church Wednesday Morning.

A very pretty wedding took place at eight o'clock this morning at St. Francis de Sales church at which time Mr. Roy J. Baird and Miss Rose Duffey, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The guests included besides the nuptial couple, the parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Cantlebury, Mrs. John Duseberry, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Robinson, George Duffey, Daniel Clark and Edward Duffey and their favorite attendants of this city. The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Connally of Junction City and Mr. Wm. P. Duffey of Shawnee. The groom is a well known young shoe clerk and is connected with the Evans and Jones shoe store, and is the brother of William Baird, the recorder of Perry county. The bride is the youngest daughter of William Duffey the popular B. & O. engineer, and is a beautiful and accomplished young lady and a favorite in social circles. The newly wedded couple were attended by Mr. John Duffey, brother of the bride, and Miss Lillian Robinson. The pastor, Rev. B. W. O'Boyle, celebrated nuptial mass and solemnized the ceremony according to the beautiful ritual of the Catholic church. The house was beautifully decorated with the centerpiece of American beauty roses and white lilies. Many useful and valuable presents were given as tokens of the esteem in which the contracting parties were held. A sumptuous wedding repast was served at the home, No. 19 Franklin street. The groom has furnished and provided a new home at No. 167 Hudson avenue at which place they will be at home to their many friends. The new couple ave the congratulations of their many friends who wish them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

B. & O. ORDERED
250 NEW ENGINESCOST IN THE AGGREGATE WILL BE LITTLE OVER FOUR MIL.
LION DOLLARS.B. & O. Has Made Wonderful Growth in Past Ten Years—Local Railway
News Items.

Official announcement has been made by the Baltimore &amp; Ohio railroad company of contracts being closed yesterday for 250 new locomotives that will cost in the aggregate, a little over $3,000,000.

The American Locomotive company has received the contract to build 210 consolidation type freight locomotives and 35 Pacific type passenger locomotives; and Burnham, Williams &amp; Co. (Baldwin Locomotive Works) the contract for five switching locomotives. The contract calls for the beginning of delivery of the locomotives in August and all are to be delivered by December 1, 1905.

President Murray is especially anxious to get this additional motive power in service as early as possible to meet the requirements in the steady and heavy increase of traffic over the system.

The B. &amp; O. railroad has made wonderful growth and development since it went into the hands of receivers in 1895. At the end of the fiscal year, June 30, 1896—four months after it had gone into receivership, the B. &amp; O. railroad has a total of 1,077 locomotives, while on April 1, 1905, the motive power in service had increased 824 to a total of 1,701 locomotives. In addition the affiliated lines had 124 locomotives in service. The addition of the 250 locomotives just contracted for will make the total number for the B. &amp; O. railroad and affiliated lines 2,975. This number will be slightly reduced by the putting out of service of some old locomotives when the new ones have been received, but it will still leave the road with almost double the number of locomotives it had when it went into the hands of the receivers.

President Murray has mainly done the work that has made the B. &amp; O. railroad one of the greatest in the country today. Mr. Murray came to the B. &amp; O. road as First Vice President in charge of traffic February 15, 1896, and two weeks later he was made one of the receivers with the late John K. Cowen by the court. Their wonderful ability and accomplishments in handling the property and rehabilitating it and restoring it to the hands of the stockholders is well known history. Since then Mr. Murray, who had the enviable record of being the greatest traffic getter in the country, has been the guiding spirit in rapidly increasing the physical and financial condition of the property, until today both its gross and net earnings are far in excess of what they ever had been in the history of the company.

Rapid progress is being made in getting the present rolling stock on the system in first class condition by following out the present policy of making substantial repairs and by disposing of the obsolete equipment which cannot be utilized to good advantage for the present traffic requirements. With the continuance of this method and the addition of the locomotives and cars being ordered the B. &amp; O. railroad will, within a few months, be the best equipped railroad in the country for the handling of all classes of traffic with the greatest dispatch and safety.

With the ten thousand freight cars which the company has decided to add to its equipment, and which will be contracted for in the near future, the end of the calendar year will show an addition of 11,250 new cars and 250 locomotives of the most modern design to the equipment of the B. &amp; O. railroad. This equipment, combined with the improved track and transportation conditions and facilities, and the better maintenance of the present rolling stock, will insure an efficiency second to no railroad in the country for the handling of coal, which is a large percentage of the consider the advisability of moving the yards.

The yards will be built in such a manner that the cars can be taken to the top of a grade which will be sufficient to allow the cars from their own momentum to run onto the desired track, thus saving the motive power many miles of travel.

In case this is done, the yard offices will probably be moved east. The scene of activity will change from the present yard office and vicinity to a point several hundred yards east of the lower machine shops.

Mr. Daly was not in his office Wednesday morning, and could not be seen regarding the matter, but it is known that he plans have been drawn for the improvement. The work will in all probability be commenced with in a few weeks and the improvement will be rushed through as quickly as possible.

FIRST LEGAL STEP

Is Taken to Enforce Law Requiring Railways to Equip Trains With Safety Devices.

Cleveland, O., April 26.—The first legal step by the federal authorities in Ohio to enforce the law requiring railways to equip trains with safety brakes and other safety devices has been taken by United States Attorney Sullivan. He has filed a suit against the B. &amp; O. In this suit the United States attorney alleges an offense, and seeks to collect a penalty of $100.

"The object of the suit," said Mr. Sullivan, "is not to collect the penalty but to enforce the law. All trains should be equipped with all possible safety devices for the protection of trainmen."

The Supreme court recently passed upon the validity of this law and upheld it. Accordingly the attorney general called the attention of the United States attorney in each district to the decision and the points it covers and requested him to see that the law was enforced in his territory.

Information supplied by agents of the Interstate commerce commission, which is prosecuting the campaign against railways which have not complied with the law.

Colonel Bunker's War Talks

He Relates Reminiscences of Charming Interest--His Many Narrow Escapes.

"YES, suh, it is a long ways back to the wah," said Colonel Bunker as he finished his cocktail and slowly litigated a cigar--"long ways, suh, and we who fought it are about ready to lay down our knapsacks. I'm not bringing up the question of whether the struggle was right or wrong, but I'm sorry for the brave men who fell in the ranks. And while I do not care to speak of myself--of my personal life, suh--I have every reason to believe that I came out of the wah with credit to myself and the cause."

"I don't refer altogether to my conduct in battle. There were side issues--several side issues--which I had to face and overcome. "Soon after I became major of my regiment I met up with Major Goldwin of an Alabama regiment. We were thrown together by accident, and we became convivial, and it was while in a state of conviviality that Major Goldwin expressed the wish that we had a Napoleon to lead the Confederate troops. I could only take his words as an imputation on the military skill of the gallant General Lee, and almost as soon as he had uttered them my glove struck his face and I asked him to name the time, place and weapons."

"There we were, Major Bunker versus Major Goldwin, and we met at sunrise the next mornin' with swords as weapons. I was never in better spirits in my life--cool, calm and determined--and I resolved to force the fighting from the word. I even had the spot selected through which my sword was to pass into the major's body. I should have killed my man--pierced him through and through--but as we received our swords he remarked to me:

"Major Bunker, I wish it to be understood that I had no thought of casting aspersions on the character of our brave general. I meant that Napoleon should only lead under Lee."

"That put a different look on matters, of course," said the colonel, "and after some further conversation the duel was declared off. As a man of honor I had taken the major as he said; as a man of honor he had said one thing and meant another. General Lee sent for me, but what passed between us I shall hold sacred--sacred as the grave. Don't you think smoking conducive to thirst, suh?"

After the colonel had put in eight minutes assuring the dryness of his throat he picked up the remnant of his cigar and continued:

"Egad, suh, but give a man a reputation as a duelist and his work will be cut out for him. It soon became noised about that I had brought Major Goldwin to book, and I had scarcely been promoted to a lieutenant colonel when Adjutant General Graham of the Third corps took opportunity to criticize the way I led my men into action at Glendale. When we charged, suh, I was at the head of the regiment, suh. I waved my sword five times around my head and then lowered it, and the adjutant contended that I was short by two waves. We had an argument which grew into a dispute, and at length I looked him straight in the eyes and said:

"Adjutant Graham, should it be your pleasure to meet me on the field of honor I will endeavor to wave my sword until one or the other of us has received full satisfaction."

"Egad, suh, but I have been told that my remarks were true and to the point, and I rather reckoned they were. We met early next mornin'. My attitude was the same as before, suh--the same as before--that is, it was calm and determined, with a feeling that I should conquer. To do the adjutant justice, he toed the mark, but there was a great difference in our demeanor--a great difference in my favor. We were about to place ourselves on guard when the adjutant stepped back and said:

"Colonel Bunker, I am back at your service--at your service, suh--but as a man of honor I wish to make an explanation. At Glendale you waved your sword five times around your head and called upon your brave men to follow you. I was under the idea, suh, that the tactics called for seven waves, and hence our dispute and this meeting. Last evening I looked up the matter and discovered that we were both wrong. It was six waves of the sword. Colonel Bunker--six waves and a determination to conquer or die."

"Well, suh," said the colonel as he slowly pushed the ashes off his cigar with his finger, "as we were both wrong and as we were both men of honor the only way to do was to shake hands over the matter and become reconciled. I was pleased and yet not quite satisfied. I had determined to pink him in the right shoulder--and I felt that I had surrendered a privilege. The credit of calling him out was mine, however, and I could not fail to observe that I had gained a point or two. Four weeks later I was a full colonel. You can draw your own inference, suh--your own inference. I observe that it is now 3 o'clock in the evening. It is my usual custom at this hour that is, at 3 o'clock in the evening."

There was no reason why his usual custom should be broken in upon, and after it had been duly repented he gracefully crossed his legs and musingly observed:

"I should have killed Colonel Hopson, suh--killed him stone dead at the first fire but for an unlooked for interruption. At the battle of Manassas I had three horses shot under me--three horses, suh. A year later one day while conversing with Colonel Hopson on the incidents of the battle he turned and said:

"Colonel Bunker, allow me to tip my hat to you, suh. You had eleven horses shot under you at Manassas, and yet you took it as a matter of course. You are a chevalier of old, suh--a chevalier of old."

"Only three horses, Colonel Hopson--only three," I replied.

"Eleven, Colonel Bunker."

"Three, Colonel Hopson."

"And thus we disputed, suh. The colonel had somehow got the number of horses at eleven and wouldn't give up, and of course I stuck to three. The result was that I called him out. He was a brave and gallant man, suh, and he was on hand in a minute. He chose pistols, and I felt it my duty to remove him to another sphere of action. A brave and gallant man, suh, but he was killing too many horses for my credit. We had taken our stand and were ready for the word when the Federals suddenly attacked our center. General Lee sent an aid to find me and to order me to hurl my regiment into the thick of the fight, and he came upon us at the critical moment. I was about to shoot Colonel Hopson through the head, but orders from the chief were not to be disobeyed. As I turned away I said:

"Colonel Hopson, our affair is off for an hour or so."

"When we have beaten the Federals back," he replied.

"But it was not to be, suh--not to be," signed Colonel Bunker as he rose up. "When we had beaten the Federals back--when my regiment had performed deeds to live in history forever--I returned to the field of honor. Alas, I had no opponent! Colonel Hopson had fallen in the thick of the field, dying as a soldier should, and there was no one for me to shoot at. And, egad, suh, he probably went to his death firmly convinced of the report of the eleven horses--the eleven horses shot from under me at Manassas! Too bad, suh--too bad! It was an utter waste of eight horses!"

LATEST PORTRAIT OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Despite the fact that there have been hundreds of photographs of President Roosevelt, there are very few which are good portraits. The photograph from which the accompanying illustration is made was taken but a short time before the president started on his present hunting trip, and he has pronounced it the best picture he has ever had.

Pictorial Phases of the Day's News

OME IDEA of what a shell does to a modern building may be gained from the accompanying picture of one corner of the Russo-Chinese bank in Port Arthur. During the siege the bank was struck twice in the same corner by Japanese projectiles, and the larger of the two apertures made in the brick wall was seven feet high by about five feet broad. During the siege the hospitals were struck repeatedly, and a number of sick and wounded men were killed in their cots. The Japanese declared that bombarding hospitals was not their intention, but that after their big guns had been fired many times their accuracy was impaired and the offending shells fell short of the real marks aimed at. Many of Port Arthur's noncombatants lived in caves, but even here the shells at times searched them out and killed them.

Former Postmaster General Robert J. Wynne, who was recently appointed consul general of the United States to London and has now taken up his residence there, has a son who is a gallant officer in the navy and who was the foremost figure in an international incident which for a time threatened to cause bad feeling between the republic of the United States and the kingdom of Italy. The consul general's son, Captain Robert F. Wynne, was in command of the marine guard of the cruiser "Chicago" when some of the officers of the cruiser went ashore at Venetie and got into trouble with the municipal authorities. While the officers were in a fare, a table was accidentally overturned and some wine glasses were smashed. A collision between the officers and the Italians resulted, and the Americans were taken before a magistrate, where they were sentenced to terms of imprisonment considered to be altogether out of proportion to the offense, even supposing them to have been guilty of the acts charged. Captain Wynne's term of imprisonment was over four months. He and the other officers were for some days confined in a filthy cell and subjected to indignities. All were subsequently pardoned by the king of Italy and investigated exculpated Captain Wynne from any charges of conduct unbecoming a gentleman. The captain fought with distinction at Guantanamo, in Cuba, during the Spanish war, at the battle of Noveleta, in the Philippines, and at the battle of Tientsin in the Boxer rebellion in China, when he was under fire for fourteen hours. He was recommended for gallantry in action on account of his conduct in China.

Brigadier General Oswald H. Ernst, who has been appointed to the reorganized Isthmian canal commission, was first designated a member of the canal board in 1889 by President McKinley. He has spent his life in study of engineering problems and has been identified with some extensive works of this character. General Ernst was born in Cincinnati in 1842. He was at Harvard university for two years, but left there to enter the West Point Military academy, where he graduated in 1864 as first lieutenant in the engineer corps. He saw active service in the Atlanta campaign of that year and afterward served as assistant engineer on fortifications of the Pacific coast. He was astronomer with the United States commission to observe the solar eclipse in Spain in 1870 and has been superintendent of West Point academy and engineer in charge of numerous river and harbor improvements throughout the country. In 1888 he served with credit in the Spanish war, participating in the campaign in Porto Rico.

Representative Joseph Crocker Shibley, who has begun a fifth term as a member of congress from Pennsylvania, is one of the most picturesque figures in that body. He has been a Methodist exhorter and a sportsman, a good judge of horseflesh, a yachtsman and an enthusiastic devotee of the automobile. When congress met in extra session not long since he sailed to the national capital in his yacht and, as he expressed it in his speech, "left a post out in the Potomac." A fellow congressman who had just been elected author of a bill to name streets after heroes of the Civil War, which did not contain the theory of Tolstoy, introduced the bill and is noted for his opposition to all the aristocratic tendencies of the city. He is a very simple life and is noted for his opposition to all the aristocratic tendencies of the city.

Wallace Jewell, writing in the New York Globe, pictured him as sitting in dejection and reflecting upon what was being done to him by men beyond what Dr. Osler terms the chloroforming age, sixty years. According to the poet, the general soliloquized thus:

That little fellow Nod, though he's past three score and 6,
Is prancing like a three-year-old around my blue umbrella,
Is tying 'em in knots that buster my Pants in two.

If O. P. only knew of this, if O. P. only knew!

Then there's that old Oveta, who my Stumbler never turned.

If O. P. only knew of this, he should be chloroformed.

Yet there he stands performing tricks that Young men should do.

If O. P. only knew of this, if O. P. only knew!

The Man Behind the Gun In Japan

HE public has heard a great deal since the war in Manchuria began about the Japanese soldier, but has not been supplied with so much information about the men behind the guns of the Japanese navy, upon whom so much depends at this time. The bravery of the Japanese on land has surprised and astonished the world, but it is not more remarkable than the courage the tankado's subjects have displayed on the sea. The Japanese can now build their own cruisers and small men-of-war in their own navy yards, and an English writer predicts that they will soon be building battleships equal in size, speed and armament to anything afloat. The methods of other nations in naval warfare as well as in land military operations have been diligently studied by them since the awakening of the nation some thirty-five to forty years ago. Admiral Toga, the brilliant commander in chief of the naval force now a center of interest, was sent to England as a young man to study the system of the nation which has long been reckoned the greatest naval power in the world. The influence of the training he received there is seen in the character of the Japanese navy today. It is said that the ships in that navy which are the closest copies of the English men-of-war are those on which Toga has served.

To modern science in naval warfare the Japanese sea fighters unite the spirit which animated the samurai of old. This was illustrated when the Japanese fleet was about to sail for the Manchurian coast at the opening of the present war. On his flagship, "PAPA" LINEVITCH IN THE FIELD.

Russian army in the field by Lieutenant General Linevitch, who is sixty-six. According to Osler, he should have been chloroformed six years ago. Nodji is not quite so old as the poet makes him, being five years under the chloroforming age, but he has been a warrior for forty years. General Kuroki is sixty-two, and General Nodji is sixty-four, so that the military situation in Manchuria does not bear out the Osler theory, it is argued. General Linevitch assumed command of the Russian forces at a discouraging juncture of affairs, as the army had sustained disastrous defeat at Mukden and was on the retreat toward Harbin. His personal popularity with the soldiers is said to have served him in good stead. George Kennan says of General Linevitch in the Outlook:

"The army knows and loves only one general, and that is 'Papa' Linevitch. No matter in what part of the army I have been, I have heard everywhere the words, 'If papashas were only here! He is the man whom both officers and soldiers trust.'

AS AN OFFSET.

"Why should governments interest themselves in the healthfulness or unhealthfulness of the food the people eat?" asked the man with the thirst for knowledge.

"For the reason," replied the man with the information to give out, "that when wars, automobiles and grade crossing accidents are doing so much to reduce the population of the earth, something has got to be done to maintain the equilibrium"--Chicago Tribune.

DISAPPOINTED.

"Lack never manages things just right," said the irritable man who dislikes music. "It might just as well have been the other way around, but it wasn't."

"What is the trouble now?"

"My daughter who plays the piano has a sore throat, and the one who sings has a sore finger"--Washington Star.

PLACING THE BLAME.

"This new form of spinal meningitis seems to baffle you physicians."

"Baffles is not the word, sir. Nothing baffles a physician."

"But you don't seem able to cure it?"

"Oh, that's an entirely different thing. That's the fault of the disease, not our fault," replied the medic, Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

OFFERS LANDS

TO THOSE WHO SUFFER LOSS AT HIS HANDS.

Wolz Claims They Will Get Nothing by Prosecuting Him—Old Man and Can't Hold Out Long.

Supplementing the Advocate's special telegram Tuesday from Marion, O., saying that Wolz the former Newark real estate operator had waived examination, and had been bound over to court the Marion Star says:

The matter of the State of Ohio in complaint of James Swank of Bowling Green township against G. W. J. Wolz, charged with selling, and without a title and stealing, and carrying away $240, was taken up in the court of Justice Harry S. Thompson Tuesday.

Owing to the absence of a number of important witnesses it was necessary to postpone the hearing until afternoon, and as the witnesses were late in arriving, the hearing was not begun until 2 o'clock. During the intermission Wolz made the prosecuting witnesses and others claiming to have suffered loss at his hands, a proposition to settle their claims by turning over other lands in Kentucky to the amount and value of the lands he had sold to them, and supposed to be located in Tennessee.

Wolz, who is about 78 years of age, stated that perhaps those prosecuting him could have him punished for some wrongdoing, and perhaps they might fail, but in any event the punishment could not be of long duration as he had reached an age where life could stand but little, and could not hold out long. On the other hand, if the complainants were willing to accept other lands and settle, they would be compensated to the full value of their alleged losses. The proposition was regarded with such a feeling of uneasiness, that it was given no serious consideration at the time it was made.

Wolz then waived examination and was bound over to court. In default of a $500 bond he was committed to jail. After the service the Knights and ladies will take refreshments at Hotel Seiter.

There will be a course of seven lectures given at Pine street chapel, the first of which will be given next Friday night, by the Rev. O. C. Wright of Columbus. Single admission 20 cents. Course tickets $1. Doors open at 7:15; lecture begins at 7:45. Come early.

HARRY FREINER IS BOUND OVER

BOND REMAINS AT $5000 AND HE IS RETURNED TO JAIL BY OFFICERS.

Large Crowd Present in Court Room When Youthful Prisoner Was Arraigned.

A large crowd gathered at the Mayor's court in the city building Wednesday morning for the hearing of Harry Freiner, who is charged with shooting Thomas Osborn. The prisoner was brought into court by Officer Zergiebel and sat during the short delay which preceded the hearing calm and apparently uninterested.

Freiner's attorney gave notice that the defendant would waive examination and Mayor Crilly bound the man over to the Court of Common Pleas. In the matter of the bond, the mayor asked the opinion of the physicians present as to the injured man's prospects for recovery, but they could give no positive statement that he would live. The court then fixed the bond at the same figure. In case the man continues to improve and the doctors decide that he will get well, the bond will be reduced.

In default of bail, Freiner was returned to the county jail until his case is called for hearing in the Common Pleas court.

SUIT IS FILED AGAINST MISS DAISY CHERRY AND HER PARENTS.

Mary Butte Begins an Action for $10,000 for Slander—Divorce Suit. Day's Court News.

Mrs. Eva D. Bloomer has filed suit against Margaret G. Cherry, alias Daisy Cherry, Sarah J. Cherry and Charles H. Cherry for $12,000. The plaintiff claims that for more than two years prior to the 9th of May, 1902, the defendants in order to deprive the plaintiff of the affections, service and support of her husband, Bryant J. Bloomer, now deceased, at numerous times induced him to go to their home in Newark, and for the same purpose gave him presents and tokens of affection, including the picture of Daisy Cherry. The plaintiff claims that the defendants persuaded, enticed, and induced Bloomer to abandon his wife, which he did on the 9th of May, 1902. She claims that this action has damaged him to the extent of $12,000.

Smythe &amp; Smythe are attorneys for the plaintiff.

SECRETARY TAFT

Gives Important Decision
Regarding Policy

TRAFFIC ACROSS THE Isthmus

No Discrimination is to be Made Between the Several Steamships Lines at Panama.

CELESTE

Washington, April 26.—Secretary Taft has made a decision of the greatest importance to railroad interests respecting the policy of the government relative to the existing monopoly of traffic across the isthmus of Panama and the fixing of rates over the Panama railroad as bearing on the existing rates on transcontinental traffic. The publication of several interviews recently with the secretary himself, with President Shantz of the canal commission and with Chief Engineer Wallace has led to much confusion in the public mind on these subjects. In his letter the secretary makes it plain that there is to be no discrimination whatever as between the several steamship companies in handling their business across the isthmus, and that he does not anticipate any considerable effect upon the transcontinental traffic arrangement of Panama rates, but that this readjustment will be had regardless of such effects.

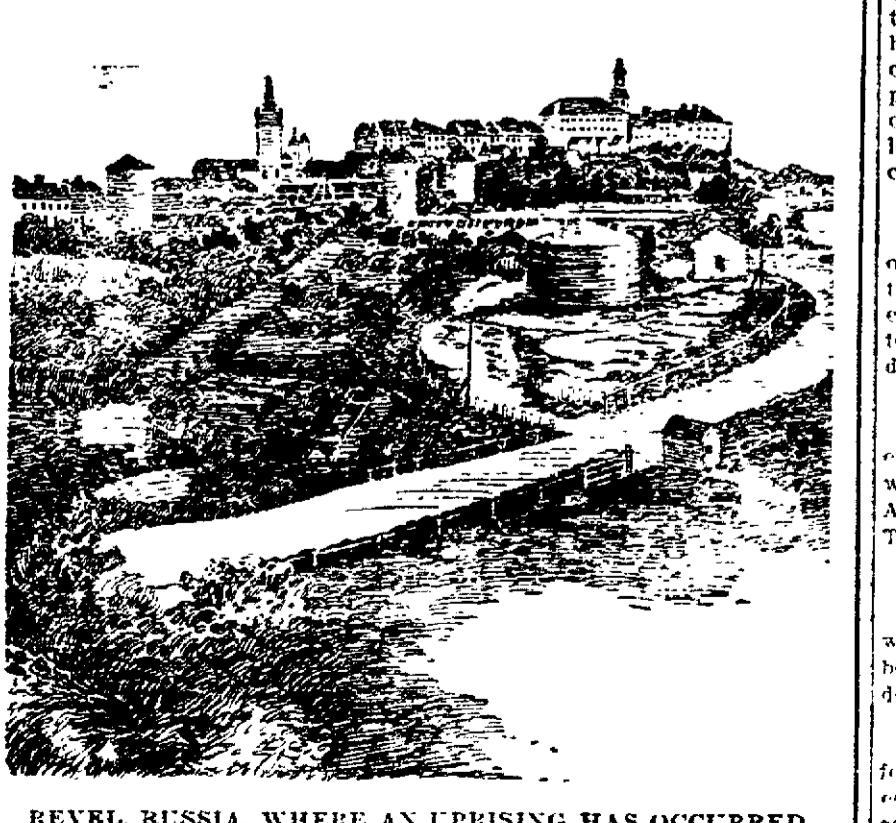

Secretary Taft's letter is addressed to James I. Horner of Cincinnati, of the Shippers' association, and in it he says:

"The policy of the government in managing the Panama railroad is to charge such rates as will pay for the carriage of the goods across the isthmus a reasonable return on the investment of the government and nothing more. It will permit no discrimination against or in favor of any of the connecting steamship lines. It may be that this policy will affect the transcontinental rates as to those classes of freight that can stand the isthmus trip favorably for the shipper. The long trip and the fact that the merchandise carried is to be a considerable period in the tropics exclude all possibility of carrying many kinds."

The Panama Railroad company owns three steamships, which ply between New York and Colon. We shall make the rate upon these ships as low as possible, consistent with paying a reasonable compensation for the carriage and the investments. We shall run them merely for the purpose of preventing a combination to raise the rates for the delivery of material for the construction of the canal from the United States to the isthmus. The government is not running and does not expect to run a line between New York and San Francisco or between San Francisco and New York; hence the relation of its policy to transcontinental rates is only indirect.

"So far as the action of the Panama Railway company can break up the existing steamship monopoly, it is being taken. We shall do what we can to make just rates and avoid discrimination. If this ameliorates conditions we shall be glad. If it does not, then it will not be in our power to do more."

REVEL, RUSSIA, WHERE AN UPRISING HAS OCCURRED.

Revel, Russia, which has been the scene of recent uprisings of the people, is a fortified city on the Gulf of Finland, about 200 miles southwest of St. Petersburg. The town was founded by the Danes. Perhaps its most striking feature is a magnificent castle on the heights overlooking the place.

EPIDEMIC

Of Spinal Meningitis Breaks Out in Bristol, a Little Town Near New Lexington.

New Lexington, O., April 26.—An epidemic of spinal meningitis has visited the little village of Bristol, four miles south of New Lexington and two deaths have already resulted. Essie Starr, aged 10, died of the dread disease Friday and was buried at Maplewood cemetery, this city Sunday afternoon. Virgil Spurbeck, the second victim of the epidemic succumbed to "quick death" Sunday night at one o'clock. He is survived by a wife and two children. The funeral was held Tuesday.

The village has not been quarantined as the doctors believe it unnecessary.

Residents of this place are greatly alarmed, fearing that the epidemic may spread to New Lexington.

An Arrest at Hempstead.

Hempstead, Tex., April 26.—As a result of the bloody battle here, when four men were killed and others were wounded, Hempstead is under the control of the Texas rangers. Adjutant General Hulin arrived and assumed charge of affairs. Rolan Brown, the son of one of the men killed at the Prohibition mass meeting Monday night, was placed under arrest on the charge of firing the shot which killed Representative John M. Pinckney. He stated that the father was under the influence of intoxicants when he attended the meeting, and that he (the son) attempted to dissuade him from attending. His father was firm, however, in his intention, and went to the meeting. The son followed and took part in the shooting.

Heavy Rains Produce Washouts.
East St. Louis, April 26.—The heavy rains have undermined the railroad tracks in this vicinity, causing much delay to both passenger and freight trains. The Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern tracks were washed out near the yards here, causing the ditching of a freight train and the death of Engineer Charles Catton. At French Village the tracks of the Louisville and Nashville were washed out for more than 100 feet. Passenger trains on both the Baltimore and Ohio and the Louisville and Nashville are using the Illinois Central tracks.

CONFIDENCE

Has Been Restored at Milwaukee and Run on the Bigelow Bank Has Subsided.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 26.—Confidence has again been restored in the banking institutions of Milwaukee, and the run on the First National bank and the Milwaukee Trust company which was caused by the defalcation of Frank G. Bigelow, until Monday president of the First National bank, of over $1,000,000, is a thing of the past and banking affairs in Milwaukee have resumed their normal condition. The banks affected were all able to cope with a long run, but it was decided by all the banks in the city to take advantage of the law on time deposits, requiring a notice of 30 days of withdrawal on amounts less than $100 and 90 days where the amounts exceeded that sum. As rapidly as the depositors appeared at the wickets of the savings departments of the affected institutions their passbooks were stamped acknowledging the notice of withdrawal and the depositors took their departure.

There is only one $10,000 government greenback in existence. It is owned by a Dickinson county farmer, and he refuses to let the government retire it.

CHARGE MADE

Against Officials at Pottsville, Pa., of Conspiracy and Malfeasance in Office.

Pottsville, Pa., April 26.—The taxpayers' association of Schuylkill county created a sensation here by causing the arrest of members of the school board, the entire borough police force and a justice of the peace, all of Shenandoah, charging them with extorting money in the performance of their duties. All waived a hearing and entered bail. Specific charges are made against school directors Joseph Bierstein, Jacob Noll and David Fiest, charging them with demanding $300 from a widow for the appointment of her daughter to a school, and with having demanded and taken $225 from Miss Hand for an appointment to the same position. Justice of the Peace W. H. Shoemaker is charged with felony and with conspiring with policemen to run up illegal bills of costs for cases settled at his office. Chief of Police John Frye and four patrolmen are charged with conspiracy and malfeasance in office.

Judge Hargis Testifies.

Lexington, Ky., April 26.—Judge James Hargis took the stand in his own behalf. He stated he was 42 years old. The judge swore that on the day when Cockrill was assassinated he was asleep on a mattress in room over his store shortly before the shooting. King Ford awoke him to tell him Cockrill was in town. Hargis says he expressed regret that Cockrill had come to town, as he feared that he and Curt Jett would have trouble. Almost at this instant the fatal shots were fired. After the firing, he said Curt Jett came up into his room and also James Brophy and Doug Hayes. Hargis called across the street to Judge Fleenor and asked who was shot. Fleenor replied Cockrill had been shot. Hargis said that Callahan was not in the room, nor was Alex Hargis in Jackson that day. Hargis made sweeping denials of all the charges of the state witnesses.

Fire at New York.

New York, April 26.—A fire on the East Side destroyed the building that for years had been occupied by the Ridleys as a dry goods store, and a familiar landmark on the East Side, bounded by Grand, Allen and Orchard streets. The buildings were occupied by furniture dealers and manufacturers of underwear on the upper floors, while the ground floor was occupied by the Van Norden Trust company.

INVESTIGATION

Of the Equitable Company—Important Conference by Officials in New York City.

New York, April 26.—State Superintendent of Insurance Hendricks, former Attorney General Knox, counsel for the Frick investigating committee, and Henry C. Frick, chairman of the so-called "Frick committee," were in conference here regarding Equitable Assurance matters. Nothing in the way of a statement was issued after the session, but it was understood that the men in conference had agreed to combine in the investigation.

Mysterious Case.

Philadelphia, April 26.—Detectives who are investigating the case of the two servants of Miss Tillie May Forney, who died from pistol wounds, have not yet solved the mystery surrounding the tragedy. William Toppin, who formerly was employed in the Forney mansion, was detained by the police, and after he had been examined by Captain of Detectives Donaghay was released. The physicians could throw no light on the case.

Cut in Windoglass.

Hartford City, Ind., April 26.—The American Windoglass company, or trust, which makes windoglass by blowing machines, has announced a cut in prices of 90 and 40 off the list price, which makes the estimated cost of the glass per box about 75 cents less than the human blower concerns can make it.

Shot a Soldier.

Moscow, April 26.—Disturbances occurred at the Moscow Kazan station when the Omsk regiment was entraining for the far east. A lieutenant with his revolver killed a soldier for insubordination.

Judge Shannon Stricken.

Woooster, O., April 26.—Judge Clement Shannon, of Bucyrus, was stricken with a stroke while a guest of the American hotel here and is now dying. There are few hopes for his recovery.

Veteran Police Chief Dies.

Troy, O., April 26.—George F. Irwin, who for the past eighteen years has been chief of police of this city, is dead.

The cords of the University of California decided recently to go bareheaded in the campus and in the streets, regardless of weather. But the senior girls have now decided to wear the mortar board, and the juniors, sophomores and freshmen accuse them of beach of faith.

MR. ROCKEFELLER ANSWERS GLADDEN

OIL MAGNATE REPLIES TO DR. GLADDEN'S LATEST ATTACK.

Intimation That Oil King Committed Perjury in Testimony is Strongly Denied.

New York, April 26.—Stuart J. Murphy of John D. Rockefeller's private counsel issued a statement by Mr. Rockefeller's authority aent Rev. Washington Gladden's latest attack on the oil magnate. The attorney denies the intimation that Mr. Rockefeller committed perjury in his testimony before a New York legislative committee when the operations of the Southern Improvement company were under investigation, claiming Mr. Rockefeller was not connected with that corporation. He adds the report of that investigation was garbled, and concludes: "Dr. Gladden seeks to make out a case of perjury. Unfortunately his evidence is untrue. If Dr. Gladden has mendaciously garbled the testimony, there is nothing more to say. If he has done it ignorantly, he is scarcely less culpable, since it was his duty to know the facts."

Killed Five Bears.

Glenwood Springs, Colo., April 26.—President Roosevelt's hunting trip has been crowned with success far beyond his expectations or those of the most sanguine of his guides. Three bears were killed by the party Tuesday and two Monday, one by the president and one by Dr. Lambert, P. B. Stewart of Colorado Springs, one of the president's hunting companions, has arrived here accompanied by Courier Chapman. They brought the mink to the city, and they understood that President Roosevelt brought down two of them.

Railway Extension.

Hillsboro, O., April 26.—Assistant Engineer of Surveys Lane of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railway company, with an engineering corps of 10 men, began a preliminary survey of the proposed extension of the Hillsboro branch directly eastward to a junction with the main line at Chillicothe. The only present rail route between the two places is via Blanchester, a distance of 79 miles. Via the proposed line the distance will be 38 miles, or less than half that of the present route.

Michigan Anti-Trust Bill.

Lansing, Mich., April 26.—The lower house of the Michigan legislature passed unanimously the Eland anti-trust bill. It is said to be the most sweeping anti-trust measure ever passed in the country. It defines and declares illegal all corporations which aim at the monopoly of any business, trade, avocation or profession, and nullifies any agreement binding individuals not to engage in a certain occupation.

Attorney General of Porto Rico.

Washington, April 26.—Frank Fenlon has been appointed attorney general of Porto Rico vice Stewart, resigned. He is from Texas and has been in Porto Rico ever since the American occupation, and was at one time assistant attorney general there. He speaks Spanish fluently and has a wide knowledge of Spanish law. He is recommended by Governor Winthrop and entire executive council.

Through a Skylight.

New York, April 26.—Miss Geraldine Boardman, daughter of Albert B. Boardman, counsel to the New York Rapid Transit company, was instantly killed by falling through a skylight in a hotel at Florence, Italy.

JAIL SO FULL

THAT OFFICERS HAD NO PLACE TO PUT THE LAST TWO.

Three Tragic Deaths in Four Days—Burglars Busy—Mt. Vernon is Usually Orderly Place.

Mt. Vernon is usually a quiet city, but during the past week all the demons of the evil spirit seem to have traced their bitter revenge from that tract of land after received from that city this week says:

"Early in an excitable day in Mt. Vernon W. thought the Jersey stage horribly. The crime of Sojourner night is more so. Think of late night in Mt. Vernon in four days. The son of a prominent merchant was struck Saturday, and in a runaway car badly injured and his horse. The burglar entered the home of Rosenthal and J. C. A. in strong on high street on the same night. The jail was so full Saturday night that the officers had no place to put the two men arrested during the night.

BOERS DISPLEASED

Draft of the Transvaal Constitution is Made Public—General Cronje Condemns It.

London, April 26.—An examination of the draft of the Transvaal constitution, which has just been issued, shows that it provides for a legislative assembly consisting of the Lieutenant governor, six to nine official members and 30 to 35 elected members. Every burgher of the late South African republic is entitled to vote for members of the first volksraad, as well as all white males of British birth occupying premises at an annual rental of not less than $50, or having capital to the value of $500, unless convicted of treason since May 31, 1902, or of murder unless they have obtained a free pardon. A commission will divide the Transvaal into election districts. The debates in the assembly will be carried on in English, but the president of the volksraad may permit a member to use the Dutch language. Financial measures must be recommended to the assembly by the governor, and no part of the revenue may be appropriated without his authority. In a communication to Lieutenant Governor Lawley, accompanying the letters patent providing for the changes, Colonial Secretary Lyttelton says the time is not yet ripe to grant full self-government to the Transvaal colony.

Cronje Condemns It.

Norfolk, Va., April 26.—General Cronje, who was a member of President Kruger's cabinet for 12 years, and a noted Boer leader, was shown a copy of the Transvaal constitution, just issued from London. He said: "It is a violation of the treaty of peace made by us by England at Vereeniging May 31, 1902, which promised self-government as soon as our country was in a settled state. King Edward has been advised by the capitalists in the drawing up of this constitution, which to my mind is no constitution at all. It is no more than I expected. I thought it would come to this. One thing which remains to be done is to be patient and to work with petitions to the British government."

CHICAGO STRIKE

Peace Seems Far From Assured—A Meeting of Officials and Teamsters' Union.

Chicago, April 26.—Peace in the teamsters' strike against Montgomery Ward & Company seemed far from assured at the conclusion of a meeting of officials of the teamsters' union and the executive committee of the employers' association. The conference was arranged to discuss the provisional abandonment of the strike by the teamsters. A deadlock was the outcome. Reinstatement of all men made idle by the teamsters'

DUCK HUNTING IN JAPAN.

William Dinsdiddie Tells How They Are Hunted With Nets.

Duck hunting in Japan is thus described by William Dinsdiddie in Harper's Weekly:

Marquis Kuroda's pond is some ten acres in extent. Around its entire circumference a great moundlike wall some fifteen feet in height has been thrown up, and upon its summit and slopes a dense canebrake has been planted, which rises some thirty feet more in the air and absolutely cuts off all vision of the interior expanse of water. At intervals of some thirty yards for half the circumference of the circle and on the landward side ditches about six feet deep and five feet wide have been dug. These ditches, with the waters of the lake some eighteen inches deep in them, are about a hundred feet long, banked with earth and sodded on each side some three feet above the surface of the surrounding land. Where they enter the lake two right angled turns are made, which assure a complete screening of the lake from any outside view or vice versa.

A thousand tame ducks are kept in this lake to decoy the wild ones into the byway feeding ditches.

When the ducks once enter the ditch and begin feeding the warden pulls the bell wire and warns the host and his guests at the house several hundred yards away, and as the birds approach he pulls a second string, which connects with and closes a light wire gate where the ditch debouches into the lake. The ducks are thus trapped in a deep, narrow ditch from which they have no escape except in upward flight.

The netmen hurry to either side of the bank protected ditch and line up along its entire length with their long poled nets held rigidly and their eyes fixed on the cut in the earth. A warden creeps to the rear end of the ditch and cautiously peeps over. With a series of frightened squawks and a flapping of many wings the terrified birds rise like bullets from the water; the nets sweep through the air and are brought bottom side up on the rearward side, when a few of the most lucky and skillful are found to have a thrashing, loudly quacking duck enmeshed therein.

FIRE HOUSE FOR ROOSEVELT

Atlantic City Firemen Building Model of Their Quarters For President.

For presentation to President Roosevelt the firemen of truck B and engine company No. 3 of Atlantic City, N. J., are building a miniature fire house, fully equipped, which when completed will, it is thought, surpass anything of the kind that the president has ever received, says the New York Tribune.

Assistant Foreman William K. Rause and John C. Leeds, ladderman, who are practically doing the building, have been working on the fire house for about two months.

The exterior of the structure will be of brick, with brownstone trimmings. The roof, with its four twin dormer windows and tower, will be of slate. The front above the double doors will bear the legend in gilt letters, "Truck B and Engine Company No. 3, Atlantic City, N. J."

Within the house is modeled after the central fire station. The ground floor has seven stalls and an office and will be equipped with a tiny truck, steamer and a hose cart. A flight of stairs, with highly ornamented railings, leads to the second floor, containing the chief's office and bedrooms for the men. A sliding pole gives access to the lower floor. The rooms will be completely furnished after the manner of modern fire stations.

AMERICAN MEN SHAPELIER.

But Our Women Far Superior to All Others, Says Canadian Doctor.

Discussing the controversy as to the relative merits of the male and female form Dr. J. C. McHugh, an eminent physician of Montreal, now in Washington, declares, according to the New York Globe, "The average male, as to shape and symmetry, is far and away the superior of the average of the fair sex."

At the same time Dr. McHugh adds some comforting thoughts for American women by saying they approach nearer the masculine standard than the women of any other country.

"I have noticed the physical development of the women of every country in Europe, and on the whole they do not measure up with their North American sisters," said Dr. McHugh. The superiority of American women is attributed to better food. As to the cause of woman's inferiority to man in physique Dr. McHugh says it is a vicious system of dress. "How can a human being whose freedom of movement is impeded by skirts," he asked, "have as good legs as one who can climb and run and kick?"

Retreat For Birds and Squirrels.

Albert Hudson, a farmer near Spiceland, Henry county, Ind., has a fifteen acre tract of land which is a paradise for students of nature, says the Newcastle (Ind.) correspondent of the Indianapolis News. Mr. Hudson is a student of nature, and he selected this tract as a place where he could continue his investigations and where birds and squirrels would be undisturbed. Professor Cooper of the Spiceland academy, accompanied by the class in nature, recently spent several hours in the tract, and they recognized twenty-eight different species of birds, besides which there were numerous squirrels—gray, fox, ground, etc. The tract is thickly wooded. Hunters are not allowed to trespass on this domain, and no tree is permitted to be cut down. Mr. Hudson intends keeping the tract intact during his life, and he will make provision in his will for its maintenance after his death.

PASTOR'S NOVEL IDEAS

Iowa Clergyman's Plan to Interest His Congregation.

AMUSEMENT AND WORK PROVIDED

Rev. C. L. Organ of Lake City Has Organized Two Brass Bands Among Members of His Church—Boys Have a "King's Army"—He Publishes a Weekly Religious Paper Which Has a Large Circulation.

Believing that a church should provide both amusement and employment to its members in addition to spiritual instruction, Rev. C. L. Organ, pastor of the Woodlawn Church of Christ at Lake City, Ia., has organized a religious institution which has no parallel in the state of Iowa, says the Lake City correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

So vigorously has Rev. Organ stated his views that he already has organized two brass bands, has organized four societies in which young people find all kinds of entertainment, has established a church newspaper with a healthy circulation and has undertaken to promote business enterprises to give employment to members of his flock.

Rev. Organ has been in Lake City a little over one year and in that time has increased the membership of his congregation nearly 30 per cent, while the ratio of young people has gained several times this percentage. The membership in the church when he began was approximately 300, and during the year 100 have been added.

The first work Rev. Organ did when he went to Lake City was to organize the Brotherhood of Andrew and Phillip for young men who were Christians. This organization's constitution says, "It is to interest others for Christ and to help the members spiritually intellectually and physically." This brotherhood has a band of twenty-two pieces, which plays at all kinds of entertainments as well as for those of the church. The brotherhood started with twenty members and now has forty-five.

The young women of the church have the "Sisterhood of Mary and Martha." There are fifty-five in this society, and they have good social times and give bazaars for the benefit of the church.

For the smaller boys a military organization, "King's Army," was planned, and it has a large membership. Last fall the army encamped on the Raccoon river west of Lake City for a week and had a delightful outing. Regulation army rules prevailed. The boys had to turn out at the bugle call, get their meals at the cook tent and take care of their own dishes and tents. The hours were divided between chapel, drill and bathing, the remaining hours of the day being free until evening, when all attended camp fire and evening prayers. The army has uniforms and brass band and is thoroughly drilled. Rev. Mr. Organ plays with both hands.

The "Daughters of the King" is a society of small girls. They have drill and uniforms and have enjoyed several picnic excursions. The work is very similar to that of the boys.

A weekly religious paper is issued by Rev. Mr. Organ, the Woodlawn Christian, being a four page publication, printed every Saturday. The paper announces the services and contains religious articles. During the past year the paper has printed and circulated 35,000 copies. Its list is about 600, and the special editions have brought up the total. Rev. Mr. Organ says that he finds the paper a great help, as it keeps the people informed of what the church is doing and keeps them in touch with the work, although they may not be able to attend regularly. The paper is practically self supporting, as it has a good advertising patronage.

The financial condition of the church was never so good. Many of the young people contribute a tenth of their income. Rev. Mr. Organ's work has already become quite famous about Iowa, and a number of ministers have followed his example.

GERMAN JOURNALISTIC ENTERPRISE.

A German editor has hit upon a new idea in practical journalism, says the London Chronicle. He is mindful of the utility of his paper for making parcels and especially for tying up the popular sausage. So he addresses his feminine patrons in these terms: "You have often complained to us, dear readers and especially dear housewives, that our paper smells of printer's ink and is therefore unsuitable for carrying butter, sausages and fresh bread. Eager to meet your wishes, dear friends and household fairies, we have decided to publish twice a week an issue which will be printed only on one side, so that the other will be available for those domestic uses. And in order that you shall lose no reading matter these particular numbers will be double the ordinary size."

ATTRACTIVE TRIFLES.

Many of the Novelties in Dress Trimmings Are Homemade.

Perfectly stunning is the gold and silver lace and sequin embroidery dotted with mother of pearl sequins or with white and greenish beads.

A dainty trimming on evening dresses is made of scrolls of the thin rock fabric draped through applied empire wreaths of roses.

Black satin girdles made with long bush ends are worn with some of the dressiest shirt waist gowns. Mannish effects in shirt waist accessories have given place to soft, dainty feminine stocks of linen, lawn and lace.

If a woman uses a little ingenuity in making the trimming for her gown half the expense is saved. A most effective and stylish trimming is made out of white Brussels net which is either darned with colored silks or applied with designs cut from the material of the gown it adorns. Afterward the designs are cut up in insertions or used as large medallions finished with stitched bands of cloth or silk.

The favorite patterns in dainties are bluebells and clover. Beautiful blendings of yellow, brown and buff appear in the spring cottons.

Unless the shoulders need breadth beware of adopting the exaggerated sleeve top.

The hat illustrated is of white crinoline straw. It is dented in becoming dents all about the head. Tiny pompadour roses and loops of black velvet ribbon ornament the side and extend around to the high bandlet in the back.

Cloth Gowns Are More Severely Made—Braid Trimmings Used.

Spring tailored suits are on the French style and simply trimmed, braid being used extensively.

The cloth tailored frock will later on be superseded by one of silk. Canvas and voiles are among the new materials.

A new lease of life is predicted for linen collars during the spring and summer.

Hand etched buckles in artistic designs will be popular, and amethyst is

SORES That REFUSE TO HEAL

A Source of Constant Worry and an Injury to Health.

Whenever a sore or ulcer refuses to heal it is a sure sign that there is something wrong with the blood. It is not healthy as it should be, but infected with some germ or perhaps old blood taint that has lain dormant in the system for years awaiting a favorable opportunity for manifesting itself. Then often an insignificant scratch, cut or bruise will develop into a festering sore that resists all treatment and becomes a source of daily care and worry, affecting the entire health and causing the sufferer many hours of anxiety.

Those most usually afflicted with sores and ulcers are persons who have reached or passed middle life. The vitality of the blood and strength of the system have naturally begun to wane, and the poisonous germs with which it is saturated form an outlet on the face, arms, legs or some other part of the body and form a sore or ulcer. This being fed by a poisoned blood supply, grows red and angry, festers and eats into the surrounding tissue until it becomes what is very aptly termed "an old sore." While the old or middle-aged are the usual sufferers, the young are not exempt if the blood becomes infected with the germs.

How aggravating and stubborn these places are can best be told by some person who has nursed and treated one for years, applying salves, powders, washes and the like until his patience is exhausted and with no good results. The sore or ulcer remains and continues its work of destruction by eating deeper into the surrounding flesh, and distributing

Some years ago I was shot in the left leg, receiving what I considered only a slight wound. It developed into a running sore, and gave me a great deal of pain and inconvenience. I was treated by many doctors, and took a number of blood remedies, but none did me any good, and did not seem to check the progress of the sore. I had heard S. S. S. highly recommended for the blood, and concluded to give it a trial, and the result was gratifying. S. S. S. seemed to get right at the trouble, and forced the poison out of my blood; soon afterwards the sore healed up and was cured sound and well. I am sure S. S. S. is by far the best blood remedy made.

Lawrenceburg, Ky.

J. H. McBRAYER.

The practice of cutting out the diseased part and scraping the bone is often resorted to, but these severe measures seldom do any good. The sore may be removed and for a time heal over, but the same poison that produced it the first time is still in the blood, because the blood cannot be cut away, and it will return. Nor can external applications be of any permanent benefit for the reason that the trouble is beyond their reach and they cannot possibly have any effect on the germs and poisons—the most they can do is relieve the pain.

The only treatment that can do any real good is a competent blood purifier—one that goes to the very root of the trouble and forces out the cause; and for this purpose nothing has ever been found to equal S. S. S. It goes to the fountain-head of the disease, drives out all poison and morbid matter, reduces the inflammation and allows the sore to heal naturally and permanently. Not only does S. S. S. purify the blood of all poisons and germs, but builds it up, making it strong and healthy and able to supply every part of the body with sufficient and proper nourishment to keep it in perfect health. S. S. S. is purely vegetable, being made entirely from roots, herbs and barks, and is not only the king of blood purifiers, but the greatest of all tonics to strengthen the constitution, restore the vitality, help the appetite and digestion, and tone up the system.

If you have a sore that is slow in healing do not waste time with external applications, or experiment with unknown remedies, but begin the use of S. S. S. and by removing the catarrhe, cure the trouble permanently. Our special book on sores and ulcers and any medical advice will be given without charge.

How British Cities Manage Public Utilities

Glasgow's Profits From Its Street Railways--The "Common Good" Trust--Public Capitalism Armed With Franchises

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS

(Copyright, 1905, by Frederick Upham Adams)

GLASGOW first attracted worldwide attention by its handling of the street railway problem. George Franks Train, a tireless and brilliant American, was the first to propose street railways in Glasgow. This was in 1870. Mr. Train went to parliament for power to build lines in Glasgow, but the town council also petitioned for like power. A compromise was finally made by which the city built the lines and leased them to the company for a term of years expiring in 1894. The council drove a hard bargain with the company. The company was compelled to pay to the city the annual interest charge on the full amount of the investment, a yearly sum to the entire cost of the lines sufficient to clear the entire cost of the lines by the time of the expiration of the lease, an annual depreciation charge of 4 per cent, so as to keep the plant in perfect repair, and on top of all this an annual rental of $750 a mile. The rates of fare were limited to a penny a mile, with morning and evening cars for workmen at a penny (2 cents) a ride to or from their places of employment.

The original company sold its franchise for $750,000, and the purchasers made money on the investment. Three years prior to the termination of the lease negotiations were entered into for its renewal. It speedily became apparent that the council and the company could not come to terms. The company owned the horses and the rolling stock and had secured a charter from parliament permitting it to buy omnibuses and cabs to do business as general carriers. It imagined that it had created a monopoly and that it had Glasgow at its mercy. It refused to reduce the hours of labor for its employees or to agree to revise the rates of fare. Under no conditions would it agree not to compete with the city with buses and cabs, even providing a satisfactory purchase price were fixed.

It was a case of Scotch meeting Scotch, and the town council prepared for war. Parliament gave them the right to operate their lines, but they had less than two years in which to get ready. In that short time it was necessary to build barns, cars and all the traffic appliances; also to purchase and train thousands of horses. With a view of substituting electricity for horse-power it was decided to build the structures so that they could be used for either. When it came to the selection of a general manager the committee named John Young, and Glasgow never has regretted that decision. For years he had been at the head of the cleansing department and had brought it to a high state of efficiency.

The world is indebted to John Young for much of the progress which has been made in the scientific treatment of sewage. He established the great farms belonging to Glasgow, which now are fertilized with what were waste products. He abandoned what had seemed to be his life work and entered on a new and almost unfamiliar field of activity. He gave to it the full of a splendid executive ability. The officials of the private company sneered at the presumption of this "farmer and sewer digger." They called attention to the fact that it requires years of training and a special aptitude to properly manage street railway property.

Today John Young is president of the powerful Municipal Tramway Association of Great Britain and the admitted peer of railway experts. Street railway corporations in the United States, also the London county council, have made him flattering offers, but he will spend his life working for the city which delights to repose confidence in his honesty and ability.

Mr. Young invented a new type of car and ordered 300 of them. He erected nine stations, constructed car and repair shops, scoured the United Kingdom, France, Canada and the United States for 3,000 horses, engaged and drilled 1,300 men and for two years worked day and night in preparation for the date set for the formal opening of the municipal tramway plant. At midnight of June 30, 1894, the private company withdrew its cars, and on the following morning the new ones were seen for the first time on the streets of Glasgow. They bore the now familiar sign, "Glasgow Corporation Tramways."

There was great excitement in Glasgow. The rival company was ready for the fight with 175 omnibuses, each drawn by three horses and massed on the best paying routes so as to "blanket" the car traffic. The city fired the first gun by cutting the former rates in half, and the buses were compelled to meet the rate. Steadily Mr. Young enlarged the service and lengthened the routes for which certain prices were charged. After sustaining heavy losses the company admitted itself beaten and retired from the field.

For the first eleven months of municipal operation the tramways showed a profit of $23,000. This result had been attained against severe odds. The city had to meet the competition of the old company, the winter had been one of almost unprecedented bitterness, the horses were raw and many of the men inexperienced, the fares had been recharged. After sustaining heavy losses the company admitted itself beaten and retired from the field.

been cut from fourteen to ten, the city had purchased uniforms for its men, it had removed the unsightly advertisements which were a source of profit, it had been compelled to meet the innumerable expenses incident to the installation of a new plant, but despite all these items there remained a net revenue far greater than had been derived from the old company.

The second year of operation showed profits of $400,000. There is in Glasgow a treasury fund called the "common good," and into this the tramway department had agreed to pay $45,000 a year out of any profits which might accrue. This fund goes to investments for the good of the people, the upkeep of parks, the purchase of real estate, the maintenance of historical places, the entertainment of distinguished guests, the observance of anniversaries and for similar purposes. The fund is not supported from taxes and has many sources of revenue from estates which have been handed down for centuries. Outside of the annual payment into the "common good" the tramways do not pay a cent into the city treasury.

In 1897 the city took over the last of the private lines in or near the city. It increased the wages of its men $25,000 and again reduced the fares. In the annual statement the tramways committee called attention to the fact that the average citizen only faintly realized what was being saved by passengers on account of the longer horses and lower fares. In that year it amounted to a total of $800,000, but despite this the enterprise paid $423,000. Mr. Young and his assistants were studying electrical traction and in the following year installed the first experimental line. It was so successful that it was decided to change the entire equipment. The last horse car disappeared in 1901, or which year the receipts decreased owing to the enormous expense and confusion incident to the change. The city invested more than $4,000,000 in new equipment, but the returns for the ensuing year justified the policy of those who urged the improvement. In 1902 the net profits passed the million dollar mark. The financial tale of Glasgow's municipal tramways is told in the following table of profits since the city decided to take control of the system:

Net profits.	1895	1896	1897	1898	1899	1900	1901	1902	1903
.....	$121,000	100,000	402,000	496,000	665,000	821,000	855,000	1,045,000	1,125,000

Last year the city reduced the hours of labor from ten to nine. Its profits have been so great that it voluntarily increased its payment into the "common good" from $45,000 to $125,000. There is no uniform rate of fare, and American readers will be interested in learning how much one gets for money expended for street car trips in Glasgow. According to the statistics in the annual report for last year, the average fare was about 1½ cents in our money. For a cent one can ride on the average 58 of a mile; for 2 cents, 2½ miles; for 3 cents, 3.48 miles; for 4 cents, 4.61 miles; for 5 cents, 5.80 miles; for 6 cents, 6.89 miles; for 7 cents, 8.15 miles, and for 8 cents, 9.09 miles. Eight cents is the highest fare charged, regardless of distance, but the average fare is less than 2 cents.

School children are carried for half fare, and movement is on foot to issue passes to all who regularly attend the public schools. The cars are handsome, well lighted, clean and first class in every particular. The illuminated electric signs at the front and rear make it possible on the darkest night to distinguish one's car a square or more away.

The "common good" fund is doubtless the heir to the profits of the tramways. Not many years will elapse before the last dollar of indebtedness is paid. When that time comes nominal rates of fare will yield annual revenues of not less than $1,000,000. This and other donations will be expended for purposes indicated by the altruistic title of the fund. There is thus creating a gigantic municipal trust, constantly fed from reproductive enterprises not under the control of the taxpayers. It is steadily increasing its holdings of real estate. Under the charter creating it there is practically no limit to the field of its activities. Already it is more opulent than any individual capitalist.

There is no more interesting social institution on earth than the "common good" trust of Glasgow. It proposes to appropriate to itself all of the enormous profits which accrue from the patronage of the public. It is public capitalism armed with a franchise unlimited in its scope. Against such a competitor it is impossible to form a private monopoly. The devout Glasgow bairn, administering the affairs of his city with the same watchful care he bestows on his household, with the same shrewdness he gives to the bank of which he is a director, and with the same devotion and loyalty which mark him like a churchman thus unconscious radicalism has done more to arouse wealth from its complacent and fancied security than the writings and rantings of all of the theorists who have lived and agitated for a century.

HONORS TO A HERO.

John Paul Jones, Whose Body Is to Be Brought From France.

The Revolutionary hero John Paul Jones has been called the "father of the American navy," and by a singular coincidence his body has been discovered in an old Paris cemetery at just the time when the strengthening of the country's naval force is receiving ing so much attention. Jones was born in Scotland in 1747 and came to America about ten years before the war of the Revolution began. It was from his ship, the Ranger, that the stars and stripes first floated over the sea, and he fought twenty-three battles for the American cause. His greatest triumph was the victory he won in the Bonhomme Richard over the British warship Serapis. After the Revolution he was much in France. He died in Paris in 1792 and was buried in the old Protestant cemetery of St. Louis.

The records as to the burial were lost, the cemetery was abandoned, and buildings were constructed over it. For years no one knew where the bones of the hero rested. About five years ago a search for them was begun. Ambassador Foster accepted the task. The whole operation was conducted under the eyes of the French. The bones were removed, about five years ago, and were examined. A London expert at length examined them and reported that they had no care for my purse.

Bowser vs. Poor Food

He Gets Excited After Reading a Commissioner's Report on the Subject.

STARTS A CAMPAIGN

Visits the Butcher and Grocer--Has a Struggle With the Coal Man.

MR. BOWSER had come home in good nature and eaten a hearty dinner and found no fault, and Mrs. Bowser was paving the way to ask him to drop into a neighbor's with her for an hour or two when he opened his evening paper and had scarcely glanced at the headings when he exclaimed:

"By John, but they are at it again, are they?"

"What is it?" was asked.

"Did you read this report of the pure food commission?"

"No."

"Well, there are about a thousand men in this country who ought to be hung up by the neck without trial. The commission reports that out of fifty-two articles of food examined each and every one was adulterated. They did not find one single sample of beer, wine or whisky that was pure. Sugar, flour, coffee, tea, milk—all were adulterated, and some of the jams and preserves were positively injurious to health. I say that these rascals ought to be hanged."

"Aren't there laws against adulteration?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Of course there are laws, but the scoundrels manage to evade them in one way or another, and they will continue to do so until more radical measures are taken. Every householder ought to go for them with an ax."

"I wouldn't get excited about it if I were you."

"How can I help it? Here is a case where they found ten pounds of bone dust in fifty pounds of flour and another where a package of supposed Java coffee contained not one ounce of the real thing. Can I help but get excited when I read these things? Who knows what bones were ground up in that flour? Why, by thunder, they may have been the bones of that old horse that fell dead at our gate last summer."

"It is dreadful, but I don't see what you can do about it."

"And how much of that impure food comes into this house. Mrs. Bowser—how much? You do all the marketing, and do you ever take any pains to find out what is pure and what is poisoned?"

"How can I? We want oatmeal, and I buy package. We want sugar and flour, and I buy them. How can I tell whether they have been adulterated or not?"

"How can you? How can you? But it is your business to find out these things. Say, now, there's the keynote of the whole thing."

"What things?"

"The way I've been feeling for the last five years. I've laid it to rheumatism and a dozen other things, and I've been examined by doctors and paid out hundreds of dollars, and nothing has helped me because I've been a victim of food poison all the time. The puzzle is solved at last."

"But I've eaten just what you have and have felt no ill effects," she answered.

"That's nothing to do with it. Because you have a stomach like a horse it don't follow that I must have. Yes, Mrs. Bowser, for years and years you have been poisoning me with the food brought into this house. And there's another thing—how much clear bone has been contained in the meat brought into this house in the last year?"

"Why, how should I know?"

"But it is your business to know. You have a set of scales in the kitchen. Has the butcher worked off a ton of clear bone on you in the last twelve months, bone that we have had to pay for at the rate of 20 cents a pound?"

"You never told me to weigh the bone, and you know that no butcher will sell meat without some bone."

"Mrs. Bowser, it was your business as overseer of this house to weigh the bone and keep track of the amount, and that you have not done so proves that you have no care for my purse.

Did you ever ask the grocer whether the flour you were ordering was pure or mixed with bone dust?"

"I don't remember."

"Did you ever throw out a hint that if we found sand in the sugar it would be the last order he would get?"

"No. He would have felt insulted."

"Insulted be hanged! I'll make a little trip around this neighborhood and see who'll feel insulted. By the seven wall eyes, but if you think I'm going to stand for such things they'll have their eyes opened!"

"What's the use of going around and raising a fuss when you know it can't do any good? Let the government get after these men and punish them as they deserve."

"I'll show you what good it'll do. I am no man to wait for the government when a thing is to be done."

"Mr. Bowser, you are foolish. If you will wait—"

But he wouldn't. He pulled on his overcoat, and away he went. The butcher was the first one visited. He was leaning on his cleaver and wondering how many of the heads of the Chicago meat trust would be sent to jail when Mr. Bowser blew in and began:

"Sir, I have paid you hundreds and hundreds of dollars this last year for bones—the bones of cows, steers, sheep and hogs—and I'll be hanged if you get another cent out of me! You either send me clear meat or you get no more of my custom."

"You give me a pain, Bowser."

"What's that? Don't think to turn me off that way, sir. What is the adulterated food sold on every side and the old bones you ring in on us the people are being regularly highway robbed. If others want to stand it, well and good, but don't try it on me any longer. I'm patient and long suffering, but there comes a time at last when the worms turn."

"You'd better buy liver all the time. There's no bone in that."

"And you'd better go out of the scoundrel business before you bring up in state's prison! When I want liver, I will buy liver. Good night, sir!"

There was no doubt in Mr. Bowser's mind that he had given the butcher a good polishing off and there would be no more bone sent with his orders, and his next visit was to the grocer's. He was given a pleasant good evening, but in response he replied:

"Sir, have you got one single article of food or drink in this shebang which is not adulterated?"

"I think so."

"Well, I don't. You, sir, have been killing me by slow degrees for the last five years. Every article Mrs. Bowser has ordered from you has sapped at my health. You have known right along that you had bone dust in your flour, sand in your sugar and chicory in your coffee, and yet you have warranted them pure and wholesome. Sir, I am obliged to call you a scoundrel!"

"You can't help it. I don't believe you can show one thing which some unbung scoundrel has not tampered with."

"There are the potatoes, turnips and onions."

"Don't beg the question, sir. I called here to say that the next time you send me adulterated goods I will take your trial and follow it until the doors of prison close upon you."

"I will try to do better, Mr. Bowser."

"See that you do, sir—see that you do. It is only now and then that I take the law into my own hands, but when I do such men as you want to look out for me. Don't drive me to the dead line, sir."

There was another place to be visited, and Mr. Bowser walked on the coal man, who was at work on his books, and said:

"Sir, in the last year you have cheated me out of hundreds of dollars by sending me short weight."

Waverley's Way

Gordon Waverley was in love and had just discovered it. He had been proof against the wiles of feminine art, and having reached the age of thirty-two he considered himself immune.

Then vengeance overtook him. He did not recognize vengeance, however, in the charming guise of Madeline Vernon. He only knew that she was, as he expressed it, just the girl for whom he had been looking. This would have been very amusing to his associates had they known it, for since his grammar school days he had been noted for sedulously looking away from everything feminine.

Gordon had suffered from a blighted heart at the age of fourteen and had never fully recovered. The author of his injury, Miss Laura Boice, fifteen years his senior, had been led to the altar by his elder brother, and envy, hatred and malice had rankled in his boyish heart for several years.

At the age of sixteen he was a professed woman hater. At twenty-four he tolerated the poor, weak creatures as necessary evils which might have been dispensed with had a little more foresight been exercised when the earth and its inhabitants were being planned. At thirty he found them very convenient as managers and servants in the beautiful mansion where he dwelt alone after his parents had gone to their long rest, but he often wondered how other men found them attractive and companionable.

Now he was holding a long and not altogether pleasant interview with himself before the glowing grate fire in his luxurious library.

His thoughts reverted to the pleasures of the glorious October just passed. The long drives over the pleasant country roads—how delighted Madeline had been with the gorgeous coloring of the maples! The exhilarating rides in the crisp morning air—how well Madeline rode, and how superbly beautiful she looked in the saddle! The jolly afternoons on the golf links—Madeline was a fine player, and how full of unconscious grace!

The delightful evenings at the Grabs! He considered Jack Graham one of his best friends, and Mrs. Graham really was quite entertaining. He laughed a little in confusion as he remembered that this very high opinion of the Grabs had been reached only since the advent of Miss Madeline Vernon, a cousin of Mrs. Graham.

"I suppose," he soliloquized, his honest face reddening in the dancing firelight—"I suppose this is what they call love. There is no reason why I should be cautious now."

Mr. Tidularity once had the misfortune to figure as defendant in a libel action, and since then he has been remarkably cautious with his pen. Some little time ago he was obliged to dismiss his servant, and subsequently the lady who thought of engaging the domestic wrote to Mr. T. for the girl's character.

Now, Mr. T. might have said a good many things, but he remembered that libel suit. A week or so later a lady called upon him in anything but an amiable temper.

"I've called for an explanation, Mr. Tidularity," she began. "I engaged a girl solely on your recommendation, only to find she's worthless. You said that, like other girls, she had her faults!"

"She has, madam."

"I'm aware of it! But this is also an extract from your letter: 'In one or two departments she excels.' What do you mean by that, may I ask?"

"Well, madam, she eats well!"

"Good gracious! I should think she does!"

"Very well, madam. She also sleeps well, and those are the departments referred to!"—London Globe.

Now, instead of being hoisted, with its lapboard, its sponge cloth and its pail of dirty water, in an obscure street, servile, looked on with contempt, poor, insignificant, slow to take offense or to assert its rights, it is fixed in its location, dwells in imposing architectural piles, its rooms, whether large or small, not only elaborate and costly in all their furnishings and fixtures, but often rich with canvases and marbles from the brush and the chisel of famous artists, and proud and honored, knowing its rights and enforcing them fearlessly, is strong in the certainty that it is great and is great because of its performances.—Sartorial Art Journal.

A Whistler Story.

A friend of the late James MacNeill Whistler saw him on the street in London, talking to a very ragged little newsboy. As he approached to speak to the artist he noticed that the boy was as dirty a specimen of the London "newsy" as he had ever encountered. He seemed smeared all over—literally covered with dirt.

Whistler had just asked him a question, and the boy answered:

"Yes, sir, I've been selling papers three years."

"How old are you?" inquired Whistler.

"Seven, sir."

"Oh, you must be more than that."

"No, sir, I ain't."

Then, turning to his friend, who had overheard the conversation, Whistler said: "I don't think he could get that dirty in seven years, do you?"—Harper's Weekly.

"Well, on your honor to keep it. I learned a lot of poetry twaddle and started to reel it off to beg and she looked me straight in the eyes and said,

"Goodness, Jack Graham, are you trying to propose to me?" And I said, quite humbly, "That's what, Edith?" She laughed and said, "Jack, I wouldn't miss you for the world." That's all there was to it. If you're really in earnest just make a start, and the girl'll do the rest—that is, if she's in earnest too. If she isn't she'll make you amble through the whole thing and then say sweetly, "So sorry," "I never dreamed" and "We'll always be friends."

Waverley smiled appreciatively. Jack had been proposing since he was sixteen and he should know.

"I was going to ask you," Jack continued, "but of course I needn't now—if congratulations are in order. I heard this morning that you and Miss Vernon are engaged."

"Congratulations will have to be postponed until I go and ask her," admitted Waverley. "You sit here and read while I run over and see if the report of our engagement has any foundation in fact."

Jack obediently took the easy chair before the fireplace.

"Waverley's an odd stick," he said to the fire, "but if Madeline doesn't help him out she's a goose."

Waverley lost no time in preliminaries.

"I've just been told, Miss Vernon, that we are reported to be engaged."

"How strange! Who would have taken such a liberty?"

"Well, Miss Vernon, I think it would be far easier and certainly for me much happier to make the rumor true than to go to the trouble of denying it and trying to have the denial accepted. Can you agree with me, Madeline, dear?"

"I—I think you are right," she admitted. "Denials of such a thing are always ineffective and in some cases positively distressing. It—it would be to me in this case," she added demurely.

He took one quick step toward her, then turned and crossed the room to the telephone. When communication had been established, with his own home he called jubilantly, "It's all right, Jack; congratulations are in order, but—you needn't be in any hurry about extending them in person."

Then he sat down beside Miss Vernon and said and did things just as happily foolish as those of which he had read in the novels in his own library.

Verily, no man's way is the only way.

Cautious Now.

Mr. Tidularity once had the misfortune to figure as defendant in a libel action, and since then he has been remarkably cautious with his pen. ### INSIDE VIEW OF JAPAN

A Native's Description of Its Cities, People and Flowers.

HOW OUTDOOR NATURE IS LOVED

The People Often Take a Holiday, Says a Japanese Student, Simply to View Flowers—Beauty and Great Size of the Wisteria—Osaka, the Venue of Japan-Chrysanthemum Festival.

Under the auspices of the Workingmen's Club in Hartford, Conn., Tatsu Tanaka, a Japanese student at the Hartford Theological seminary, recently gave a talk on Japan at the Lawrence street school hall, says the Hartford Times. President William J. Ryan of the club presided.

Mr. Tanaka spoke of the love of the Japanese for everything of an outdoor nature and said that often they take a holiday simply for the purpose of viewing flowers. Yokohama, he said, is 4,300 miles from Vancouver and is the principal port of entry in the empire. It was an insignificant fishing village in 1857. The principal pier is 2,000 feet in length. Said the speaker, "People talk of Japan as already half Europeanized, but within a couple of hours after landing you will find that Japan has caprices of fashion, but never really changes. Here are all the pleasant little people you have known so long upon fans and screens. Here is the tiny Japanese lady whom you left, as you thought, on the lid of the glove box at home."

"It is eighteen miles from Yokohama to Tokyo, and the distance is traversed by a railway built after the English style. The emperor's palace is in Tokyo and is a large and beautiful structure. In ponds and trenches in Tokyo are acres of the beautiful iris. Wisteria is one of the national flowers. It is generally reared upon large trellises, arranged to cover long walks, bridges or arbors in pleasure grounds and gardens. The sprays of its flowers often exceed three feet in length, while a hundred persons may rest under its shadow, and its stems grow to the thickness of a man's body. Its branches are used as cables."

"Osaka is the second city of Japan in point of size and considered by many to be the first in commercial importance. It lies upon the banks of the famous Yodogawa and is celebrated as the military capital. In the sixteenth century the great Taiko in the short space of two years built there the grandest fortress that Japan has ever possessed. Osaka has been called the Venice of Japan, for on summer evenings the two streams of Yodogawa are covered with boats floating higher and higher, while their inmates enjoy the cool breeze from the river, the sound of music and the sparkle of fireworks.

"When one speaks of Japan he cannot forget its chrysanthemums, for nowhere else in the world are they so plentiful and so beautiful. It is said that almost 500 varieties are raised in Japan. One can find, moreover, gigantic flowers, microscopic flowers, plants of single huge blossoms and single plants of 600 to 700 blossoms. In November, 1902, in the imperial garden, Tokyo, there was one plant with 1,272 blossoms, each two and a half inches in diameter. On the occasion of the chrysanthemum festival it is customary to wear a special dress, called kikigasane, purple outside and white inside, and to drink kikusui or sake. This festival has been practically merged into that of the emperor's birthday."

HARMLESS NOISE AT LAST.

Physics Professor's Cannon That Won't Destroy the Boy.

The casualties of Fourth of July have inspired Professor William Stoddard Franklin, head of the physics department at Lehigh university, to invent a toy cannon which will make as much noise as the death engine operated with powder, but do no damage, says a special dispatch from Wilkesbarre, Pa., to the New York World.

The harmless cannon is operated on the principle of the gas engine. An electric spark ignites the gas and air, causing a loud explosion; burns a cork shell and emits a flame, which is of such a low temperature, however, that it does not even scorch tissue paper. Professor Franklin says that the cost of 5,000 shots is only 5 cents.

Biggest Grass Steer on Record. Adam Thomas of Montrose, Colo., recently shipped to Kansas City the biggest bull and grass steer ever sent to that or any other market, says a dispatch from Duray, Colo. In the pen at the Kansas City yards his back nearly to the top of the fence, and he crossed the scales at 2,400 pounds full weight. The entire shipment averaged 2,000 pounds.

Raising Onions a Recreational. Eleven young men of Hutchinson, Mo., have organized a company to raise onions, says the Hutchinson correspondent of the Kansas City Journal. They have leased a ten-acre tract on Cow creek and will put it all in onions. They expect to do the work themselves. It will be their recreation from their other jobs.

House Cleaning. A new method of house cleaning has been devised by a woman in New York.

THREE STUDENT CLASSES.

Either Puritans, Bohemians or Philistines, Says Chicago Professor.

Dean W. D. McClinton, professor of English at the Chicago university, has classified college students for the benefit of the seniors at the chapel exercises, says a Chicago special dispatch to the St. Louis Post Dispatch. The dean told the students they were either Puritans, Bohemians or Philistines or a combination of two.

"In my years of experience as a teacher I have come to the conclusion that all students can be put into three classes. There are three dominant types of girls and youths from seventeen to twenty years of age. They live either in Puritanism, Bohemian or Philistinism. The inhabitants of Puritanism are fastidious in their dress, they love their work for what they get out of it, with no thought of a future reward. They have a high code of morals and live good, honest, conscientious lives.

"The inhabitants of Bohemianism are lovers of music and art. They are equally happy with the Puritans. They are pleasure seekers, but more tickle than the other class. They feel little responsibility and put all burdens and thought of the morrow off on to the shoulders of an indefinite 'they.'

"The Philistines are not totally clean. They are built and live on a lower plane of living, morally and mentally. We are all built on this plane, but some of us are able to rise above it. They are great book lovers and absorb great amounts of knowledge, but are not cultured. They seek to accumulate wealth, and are looking for popularity or anything else that brings reward of a certain kind."

"Most students, I believe, live in Puritanism, near the border of Bohemia. A great many students drift along in their work and accomplish mediocrity. A crazy devotion to one thing is better than no devotion at all, and it is generally the people who get started in one direction who make a success. The Philistines see little good or little bad in anything. They are in a way minor indulgers. It is better to indulge than to be indifferent."

TOLLING OF BIGGEST BELL.

Scheme to Honor Memories of Veterans Buried at Arlington.

Colonel Frank Hume of Washington, who was an officer in the Confederate army, is striving to interest the Grand Army of the Republic in a scheme for the manufacture of a bell which will be the largest in the world to be hung in the National cemetery at Arlington and tolled during the funeral rites of soldiers buried there, says a Washington special to the New York Times.

Colonel Hume has been active in this work and has addressed several of the Washington posts in favor of the project, which seems to be regarded with favor by Grand Army men. The idea is to procure from the government the brass guns that will be required in the manufacture of the bell, a sufficient number of which are stored at the Watervliet (N. Y.) arsenal.

In an address delivered recently before one of the Washington Grand Army posts Colonel Hume said he had been in correspondence with Mr. McNeely of the bell foundry located at Troy, N. Y., one mile from Watervliet, who was a Federal soldier during the civil war and who explained that the project was feasible and could be carried out at a relatively small expense.

Mr. McNeely wrote Colonel Hume that "the bell should be deep toned and placed in the most conspicuous place possible. To be only at the interment of a dead soldier, the sound of its solemn ring would be something, once heard, never to be forgotten. Its enormous size would lend it a distinction and dignity impressive even when silent."

Japanese Railway Etiquette.

When a native lady enters a Japanese railway carriage she slips her feet from her tiny shoes, stands upon the seat and then sits demurely with her feet doubled beneath her, says the Chicago Tribune. A moment later she lights a cigarette or her little pipe, which holds just tobacco enough to produce two good whiffs of smoke. All Japanese people sit with their feet upon the seat of the car and not as Europeans do. When the ticket collector, attired in blue uniform, enters the carriage he removes his cap and twice bows politely. He repeats the bow as he comes to each passenger to collect the tickets from them.

Carried Dinner Pall to His Wedding.

Because he could not find time from his work for a more elaborate ceremony, Marley Denby of Terre Haute, Ind., recently brought his dinner blanket with him when he escorted Miss Arctic M. Tate, his bride to be, who was in turn escorted by a group of her admirers across the bridge from Taylorsville to an 18th street justice to be married, says a Terre Haute dispatch to the Indianapolis Sentinel. When the knot was tied the groom accompanied the bride to the east end of the bridge and went whistling to his work while the crowd probably marveled back to Taylorsville with the wife in charge.

Rest Home For Women.

One of the most unique institutions in the world is to be established near Denver. The National Business Women's League, of which Miss Louise Lee Hardin of Denver is president, plans the erection of a women's rest home at Denver. More than $100,000 will be put into the enterprise whose principal object is to cement the relations between business women of the country and afford an opportunity for women to get in touch with the work they expect to do. It will be their recreation from their other jobs.

THE NEEDS OF ALASKA

Plan to Divide the Country Into Three Territories.

POSSIBILITIES OF THE VAST TRACT

Tremendous Distances and Lack of Good Roads Are the Chief Obstacles to Efficient Administration—Transportation the Key to Alaska's Mineral Wealth—Indian Mission's Success at Farming.

Alaska divided into three territories, each with a delegate or a commissioner or an agent to represent its interests in Washington, is the picture for the future of that great stretch of country which John S. McLain draws in a recently published book on "Alaska and the Klondike," says the Washington correspondent of the New York Post. The circumstances under which it was written lend interest to it. When the special subcommittee of the senate committee on territories visited Alaska in the summer of 1903 to study the legislative problem which the new development of that region presented Mr. McLain was invited to go with them in an unofficial capacity. He saw the same things that they saw, and his view to a considerable extent is that of other persons who have visited this newest northwest.

The tremendous distances and the lack of good roads have been the chief obstacles to the efficient administration of the law in Alaska, and for better transportation facilities Mr. McLain makes quite as strong a plea as for a subdivision of the territory. He tells that Judge Wickersham of the central Alaska judicial division holds court for a district 500 miles long and 900 miles wide, or fifty times the size of New Hampshire. And yet it contains not a mile of railroad or even of wagon road worthy of the name. Steamships along the south coast and on the Yukon river, which runs through the middle of the district, furnish the only real transportation. It took Judge McKenzie, United States commissioner at Cold Foot, on the upper Koyukuk, twenty-seven days to get to Rampart to attend court, although the distance is somewhat less than from New York to Chicago.

Lack of transportation facilities greatly increases the price of the commodities which Alaska produces. This is an axiom of trade the world over, but it is doubtful if it has been illustrated better in modern times than in Alaska today. Gold is still an expensive commodity to produce. Seal skins shipped during the season of 1903 to Nome and St. Michael more than 100,000 tons of freight at rates ranging from $7 to $22.50 a ton. Coal, which costs $17 in Nome, sells for $50 a ton twenty-five miles inland. This rate at Nome would be considerably reduced and correspondingly for all the back country if suitable harbor facilities were provided there. A breakwater is the first need. It is estimated that it costs $5 a ton for the lighterage of ordinary merchandise at that point. The vessels must anchor about two miles from the shore. Their freight and passengers are then conveyed in small boats to a point but a few rods from the water's edge, where everybody and everything is lifted by a sort of traveling crane from flat boats and carried to the shore. The people of Nome believe that a jetty built out from the mouth of Snake river and the dredging of a sand bar which lies near the entrance would make it possible for small vessels and lighters to pass through to a safe harbor within the sand pit.

Mr. McLain's plan of division is to make southeast Alaska, which is in substance the panhandle strip, a territory by itself, with its capital at Juneau. It has a white population of 15,000. He would then take northwest Alaska, which has a permanent white population of slightly less, and make it a territory, with the capital at Nome. The rest of Alaska, which would be its great central and inaccessible part, should remain under its present system of government until its development warranted its establishment as a third subdivision. The people of Alaska are united in their demand for a delegate in congress, and such a bill has once passed the house. The failure of the senate to act was due to the fact that it would be difficult to elect a delegate. The distances between places are so great that there could be little opportunity for harmonious action.

Mr. McLain believes that Alaska will eventually produce its own dairy products, but acknowledges that the beginnings are decidedly small. He tells an amusing story of a Scandinavian woman at Rampart who was found one day in a high state of excitement because one of her two red cows, which were the only representatives of their tribe in any direction for hundreds of miles, seemed about to choke to death on a potato. Hurriedly this calamity was averted, and the supply of milk, which sold at $1 a quart, was uninterrupted.

The best demonstration of Alaska's agricultural possibilities was found at an Indian mission at Holy Cross under the charge of Father Leopold Van Gorp of the Jesuit order. This mission has under cultivation thirty acres, which produce fine crops of potatoes, beans, peas, canarybird, cabbage, lettuce, radishes, turnips and other vegetables. About 170 Indians are attached to the settlement. The grounds were found to be well kept and the buildings substantial.

Canada has expended $1,000,000 in the last five years on roads and trails to render more accessible the part of her domain lying near our own. The senate committee came back strongly impressed with the necessity of doing something of this kind on our side of the line. Senator Nelson secured the incorporation in the army appropriation bill of a provision for the survey of a wagon road from Valdez, on the southern coast, to Engle, on the Yukon river. The survey was made last summer, and no great engineering difficulties were discovered. In fact, the river courses furnished a natural pathway for a line of communication into the interior. Unquestionably transportation is the key of Alaska's mineral wealth. Without it little progress can be made. There are some mining districts where the transportation charge reaches $600 a ton on supplies. It is obvious that only rich strata will pay at such points. In the spring of 1902, when flour sold at $7 a hundred pounds at Dawson, it was $22 a hundred at Chicken Creek, a place which seems to take its name from the difficulties of getting any chicken. Potatoes are 25 cents a pound there and other things at prices to correspond. In fact, the scale at any point affords a serviceable gauge by which the difficulties of transportation may be measured.

THE GUN METAL PUMP.

It's the Feature of Men's Footwear For This Season.

No one color is predominant for that article wherewith man is to lace his feet after he has put his stockings on this spring and summer, says the New York Tribune. Calf and patent leather will equally be proper, and the show they will make will depend entirely on the feet, for which nature is responsible. In style, however, the oxford is to overwhelm all else. Banish high topped shoes to the cupboard after putting trees in them if you wish to preserve their shape for display next fall and have them to the shoe store for oxfords either in patent leather, box calf or tan.

Naturally tan will be the color most frequently seen, for it is by all odds the most comfortable summer shoe. The season's styles in all leathers will be shaped to a flat last with medium toe, a compromise between the razor prow of the pointed toe and the canal bow of the box toe.

The season's novelty in men's shoes is the gun metal calf pump for evening wear. It is undeniably handsome, with a medium pointed toe and a knot of ribbed, heavy ribbon where it joins the top of the foot. It is one of the most sensible shoes for evening dress wear that has been evolved from the shoemaker's last in many a day and is bound to catch the popular favor. The same pump is made in tan for sea-shore, mountain or country wear. The gun metal pump will be the feature of roof garden floors without doubt. The patent leather oxford, thus pushed aside for evening wear, will take second place as a summer dress shoe, but will nevertheless be an important figure in the summer footware wardrobe.

White oxfords either of buck or canva and rubber or leather soled will be worn for the most part at seaside resorts and mountain hotels this summer.

ONE ACRE FOR A FARM.

Intense Farming Experiment to Be Tried Near Pueblo, Colo.

Can a man make a living from one acre of land? Anthony P. Canby of Pottsville, Pa., says he can, and he is going to try the experiment in Colorado, says a Pueblo dispatch. Mr. Canby has purchased one acre of irrigated land near Pueblo, and he proposes to not only support his family of three, but also to establish a bank account as the result of intense farming.

The easterner came to Colorado for his health. He had but little money. His physicians in the east warned him against going to do manual labor and advised him to purchase just as little land as he could possibly produce a living from until his out of door life and the invigorating climate gave him strength to work a larger farm. Mr. Canby had learned of the experience of Samuel C. Cleek of Orland, Cal., who lived on a single acre of land for twenty-seven years and amassed a small fortune therefrom, and he at once announced that he would try the California's plan in Colorado.

He will utilize every foot of his tiny farm and will experiment largely with valuable plants and flowers rather than with vegetables, relying only on the latter to supply his table with necessities.

The Japanese Death Spirit.

Within the human frame is a power that passes the understandings of boasted scientists of the twentieth century, and the supreme ideal of the Nippon samurai, the yamato damashii, is a spark that does often wake that power, mysterious, unknown, nevertheless real, says Auchi Kinnosuke in Leslie's Monthly. The Nippon soldier dies when his life is under the cloud of disgrace, as he sees it. In your way of looking at things you might be superior enough to say to him, "Dear
